EDMONTON — Joe Clark said today he does not intend to bargain with the New Democratic or Social Credit parties to keep his minority government alive.

In a 35-minute news conference, Clark said he hopes "all opposition parties will want to give the Progressive Conservatives a fair chance to govern."

He told reporters that Michael Pitfield, clerk of the Privy Council and the nation's most senior public servant, will meet him this week in Jasper "to review the accounts of Canada."

A Conservative government plans no immediate expenditures or changes in public service personnel, Clark said.

Clark indicated he may soon appoint some senators from Quebec and name them to his cabinet. Of the 135 Conservative MPs elected, only two are from Quebec.

Clark refused to mention any names except to say he was seeking "people who can reflect a contemporary Quebec."

They would not necessarily have to be well-known Conservatives and would be expected to play a leading role in putting forward the federalist option in the Quebec independence referendum expected as early as this autumn.

Names of other potential cabinet ministers would be discussed during the next four days but may not be announced for another two weeks, he said.

A relaxed but tired-looking Clark then prepared to travel to Jasper, Alta., 400 kilometres west of here, to meet with his top aides and plan strategy for assuming power within a period of two weeks.

Last night, Clark pledged that Quebecers would play a large role in his new Conservative government's goal to modernize Confederation and make Canada a "model" for all nations.

Clark, who at 39 will be the youngest prime minister in history, gave no indication how his minority government will seek to win the confidence of Parliament.

First, the man who becomes the youngest and first western-born prime minister since Confederation, will hold his Jasper conference to lay the groundwork for the first Conservative government since John Diefenbaker's administration was defeated by Lester Pearson's Liberals in 1963.

Tories pluck Trudeau rose

English Canada elected Conservative Joe Clark to a comfortable minority in the hard-fought federal election Tuesday and ended Pierre Elliott Trudeau's 11-year rule.

Clark fell only six seats short of an absolute majority, which means any one of the other three parties could give him enough support to control the Commons.

And although Clark's Conservatives won only two seats in predominantly-French Quebec, he pledged that "Quebec will not feel isolated in a Clark government."

The result left Fabien Roy and his rump of six Quebec Social Crediters with the potential to provide Clark with a bare majority of 142 seats in the Commons.

Roy said during the campaign he would back the party that won the most seats. But he publicly rejected in an April 26 statement any deal with the Conservatives that would see Socreds enter a Clark cabinet.

The vote count, barring any reversals in recounts, put standings in the 282-seat Commons at Conservatives 136, Liberals 114, New Democrats 26, Social Credit 6.

The Liberals got 39.9 per cent of the popular vote in losing the election. The Conservatives got 36.1 per cent, the NDP 18 per cent , Social Credit 4.5 per cent and others 1.5 per cent

The hoarse-voiced Clark, with his wife Maureen McTeer at his side, raised his hands in a victory salute in Spruce Grove, Alta., and thanked voters for giving "a new team of Canadians a chance."

Trudeau smiled through his disappointment in Ottawa and gracefully conceded defeat to Clark shortly after the last polls closed in northwestern Canada.

"As for me, I think I will be a pretty good leader of the opposition," said Trudeau, who signalled that Clark will have to fight for the survival of his minority government.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent, a potential power broker, said after a victory party in Oshawa, Ont. he was happy with increased NDP representation in the Commons — up from the 17 seats his party held at dissolution of Parliament. But he did not divulge how his party will respond to Clark's minority government.

Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy scored a stunning personal victory in the Quebec riding of Beauce Tuesday, but his party slipped from the 11 seats it held at dissolution to capture only six of the Quebec ridings.

Clark and his top advisers retreated to a luxury resort at Jasper Park to plan the takeover of the government. Trudeau planned to discuss the Liberals' future with the remains of his cabinet and Broadbent was to spend the next few days with his caucus.

The defeat removed the last Liberal government in Canada. There now are seven Conservative provincial governments, one Parti Quebecois, one Social Credit, one New Democrat.

The heartbreak for the Liberals started shortly after the polls closed in Atlantic Canada with the de-

It's a country split down the middle

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press

The electoral map of Canada is divided today between a Quebec that went massively Liberal and most of the rest of the country which voted Progressive Conservative in Tuesday's general election.

The partisan polarization of the country comes only months before Quebecers are expected to vote in a referendum on whether they want to separate from Canada.

Pierre de Bellefeuille, a member of Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's independence-minded government, said Trudeau's defeat would improve chances of a pro-independence results in a provincial referendum expected late this year or early next.

Robert Bourassa, former Liberal premier of Quebec said prime minister-elect Joe Clark must try to get adequate representation from Quebec — presumably by adding some senators or in a future election — because "the future of Canada will be at stake."

But federal politicians of all political stripes were quick to play down the idea of a French-English split.

Said Clark after his narrow victory: "Quebecers, even if they didn't vote for us, voted massively for federalism by electing Liberals."

Stephen Lewis, former New Democratic Party leader in Ontario, said: "There is polarization, but it is not the end of the country . . . . There is a strong federalist sentiment in Quebec."

In terms of seats, the Conservatives won in every province but Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland.

But popular vote figures show the regional split was not as severe as the balance of Commons seats makes it appear.

In Quebec alone, Liberals swamped Conservatives, capturing votes from 60 per cent of the electors while Clark gathered less than 14 per cent.

But while the allocation of Commons seats suggests a deep rift in the country, the popular vote totals indicate the division between supporters of Quebecer Trudeau and Albertan Clark is not extreme.

And the provincial division of Commons seats is not as sharp as it was in the minority Liberal Parliament of 1972-74. The Conservatives then held a majority of the seats in all provinces but Quebec.

Gunmen shoot back

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Unidentified gunmen fired a fusillade of bullets into a car today killing Salvadorean Education Minister Carlos Antonio Herrera Rebollo and his chauffeur, police said.

The shootings followed the deaths Tuesday night of 14 men, women and children who were shot by police outside an occupied embassy.

Herrera Rebollo, a prominent member of the Christian Democratic party and twice mayor of San Salvador, was driving to his office when an unknown number of persons fired at his car, police said.

The shootings Tuesday night outside the Venezuelan embassy marked the second time in two weeks President Carlos Humberto Romero's forces fired on demonstrators and raised the number killed by his military regime to at least 37. The victims were shot when they tried to take food to the militants holding the embassy.

Associated Press correspondent Gordon Mott counted the 14 bodies and said at least three were women and six appeared to be teen-agers or younger.

An undetermined number of demonstrators also were wounded.

Conservatives, NDP grab all 28 B.C. seats

Times News Services

The Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party divided British Columbia's 28 seats in Tuesday's federal election, shutting out a disheartened Liberal party in the province.

The two B.C. Liberal cabinet ministers, Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo and Environment Minister Len Marchand, were among those beaten.

Campagnolo said the loss meant the end of politics for her. While unsure of future plans, the former sales person at a Prince Rupert radio station said she may work in an underdeveloped country.

The Conservatives captured 20 seats, the last being Vancouver Centre where Tory Pat Carney, an economic consultant, eked out a win over Liberal Art Phillips.

A Vancouver Centre recount is scheduled for Friday.

Former Vancouver mayor Phillips came about as close to winning a seat in parliament as a man can come and still end up a loser.

Declared a winner earlier in the evening, Phillips wound up a mere two votes behind Tory candidate Pat Carney in the Vancouver Centre riding vacated by Justice Minister Ron Basford when the last poll reported.

The NDP improved its showing in B.C. by winning eight seats, up from two in the 1974 election when there were only 23 ridings at stake. Redistribution added five seats to the province.

The stunning defeat administered to the Liberals was worse than many of their campaign workers had feared. In the last federal election, the Liberals won eight seats.

Marchand, commenting after his defeat in the interior riding of Kamloops-Shuswap, attributed the Liberal demise to an anti-Tru-

Pot bust estimate rises to $70M

By DEREK SIDENIUS

RCMP now say as much as 35 tons of marijuana — not the 20 tons originally reported — were seized in a dramatic police and Armed Forces raid northwest of Tofino early Tuesday.

"We don't know the exact amount but it appears our earlier estimates were too low," RCMP Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said today.

"There definitely is more than 30 tons and it could be as high as 35."

The drug would have a wholesale value of between $50 million to $70 million dollars and would generate more than $100 million from illicit sales.

Meanwhile an air and ground search is continuing for four men who fled into the bush when police raided a group of 24 persons offloading bales of the drug from two boats in Sydney Inlet about 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Twenty persons were taken into custody and held overnight in the RCMP lockup at Tofino. They are appear in provincial court in Victoria on charges of importing marijuana.

Three of the group are Americans, the remainder are either Puerto Ricans or Costa Ricans, Gardiner said.

In addition officers of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency arrested an American man on Orcas Island Tuesday. The man is being held in Seattle on possible conspiracy charges in connection with the drug operation.

Gardiner said he fears for the safety of the four missing suspects.

The men, whose identities are not known although one is believed to be an American, fled in light clothing without food or weapons.

The overnight temperature dipped to five degrees Celsius and a light drizzle and fog shrouded the area.

"There's nothing there but solid bush," Gardiner said. "There's an outside possibility we may never see them again."

Searchers used megaphones to try to reach the men and tell them a way to get out, and overnight the lights on a police boat moored at the head of the inlet were left on to serve as a beacon.

Gardiner said the two boats seized in the raid, the 51-metre Samarkanda and the 16-metre Whitecap are being escorted by the Canadian Forces destroyer Qu'Appelle to Victoria.

About 50 RCMP officers, backed up by 300 servicemen aboard the destroyer, took part in the raid which was the culmination of a two-month investigation by the RCMP and DEA.

When police moved in at dawn Tuesday only two men were on board the Samarkanda. Gardiner said they meekly submitted. The others, on the shore, fled into the bush and it took several hours to round up the 18 suspects in custody.

Only one person was injured — a suspect was bitten by a police dog as he tried to run off.

Gardiner said no weapons were seized.

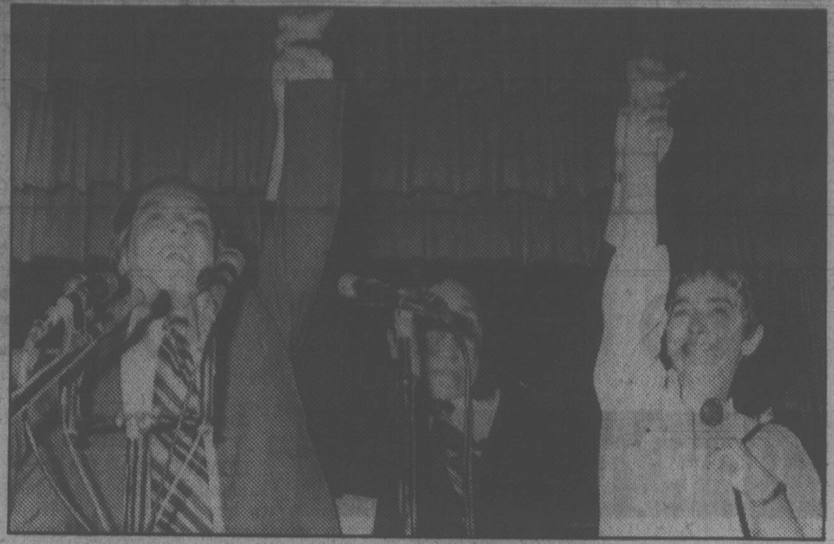
Broadbent keeps a secret



A bittersweet victory marked by the Broadbents

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

OSHAWA, Ont. — New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent, happy at the increased Commons representation gained by his party in Tuesday's federal election, went home Tuesday night still keeping secret how he will act in a minority Commons run by Conservative Joe Clark.

Broadbent called a brief late-night news conference after it was clear that Prime Minister Trudeau had conceded the election to Clark but said little but that his party would continue to fight for its programs.

But there was no hiding his bitter disappointment early this morning over coming so close — yet not close enough — to hold the balance of power in Parliament.

Attempting to sound up-beat, Broadbent told reporters at an impromptu news conference in the local United Auto Workers hall — site of a victory celebration which turned flat — that the NDP's popular vote "increased more than did that of the Conservative Party."

But Broadbent saw his potential king-makers' role disappear despite the impressive string of NDP victories in 26 Commons seats.

New Democrats appeared to feel that they would not hold the power they expected to hold after Tuesday's voting because Clark ended only a handful of seats short of a majority.

The news conference was called in a room away from a campaign headquarters that had been left in a mess after hours of drinking and dancing by celebrating New Democrats.

He said he would continue fighting in Parliament for the serious and important issues he had fought for during the eight-week campaign. He would show the same vigor and determination to protect medicare, to seek reduction of food prices, to regain control of resources he had in the past.

Broadbent was graceful — despite his frustration — as he summed up the election result for reporters and a few dozen stragglers who stayed on at the victory party until the bittersweet end.

"I want to begin by congratulating Joe Clark on his successful election campaign," he said as he began a brief, two-minute statement.

"All Canadians, I'm sure, will wish him well at this moment with his serious obligations.

"I should also add I was pleased to see the graciousness with which the prime minister (Pierre Trudeau), in effect, submitted his resignation to the people of Canada tonight."

When he visited the UAW hall earlier in the evening, after polls had closed in Ontario, Broadbent said "frankly, I would have hoped to win," more seats in the key Southern Ontario election battleground.

It was the NDP's lacklustre showing in Metro Toronto that deprived the party of the balance of power.

SC splinter thorn in side for Tories

Jubilant Roy after personal win

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Joe Clark's near miss in his attempt to elect a majority Conservative government could be good news for the Social Credit party.

The Socreds, under their new leader Fabien Roy, slipped from nine to six seats in Quebec, but that handful of seats will be nearly enough to push through Conservative policies in the new house against Liberal and NDP opposition.

But the Socreds will not enter any formal agreement to support the Conservatives or any other party, Roy said Tuesday before the results were all in.

"There is no question of supporting one party or the other. If the measures the party in power proposes conforms with our program, then we will support it," Roy said.

"We will fight those proposals which benefit only pressure groups or a minority government. We will force the government in power to face its responsibilities and proceed in the right direction."

The party fell short of its 25- to 30-seat goal, but the six Quebec ridings the Creditistes held may still assure Roy a key role in the next Parliament.

When the federal election was called March 27, Roy was interim leader and the only sitting member of the Popular National Party, a small-c conservative splinter in the Quebec national assembly.

He had been considering an offer to become Social Credit leader and with the election call, he resigned his Quebec provincial seat to take the reins of the party that Real Caouette led from nowhere in 1962 to win 26 Quebec seats.

Premier Rene Levesque praised him and wished him luck. Later, outlining the position of the Parti Quebecois cabinet on the federal election, the premier endorsed the "revitalized" Social Credit party under Roy.

In concrete terms PQ support for Roy did little. Only in the Saguenay-Lac St. Jean region of north-central Quebec did the PQ machine actively work for Social Credit.

Nevertheless, the opposition Liberals will be able to use the suggestion that the Clark government is dependent on Creditists who have the backing of Rene Levesque when the new Parliament sits.

If his minority government falls before its term, Clark would probably not enjoy having the Liberals base their next campaign on claims that the Tories were in bed with PQ fellow-travellers.

Premier Levesque has played down the referendum on sovereignty-association until now, saying that he didn't want it to become an issue in the federal election campaign.

Levesque said he would set out the timetable for the referendum and define clearly what sovereignty-association means after the federal vote.

But with a minority government in Ottawa, the PQ may still have to tread carefully in the awareness that a federal election, fought on the Quebec issue, could be called at any time.

Clark has only two seats in Quebec and if Fabien Roy says he speaks for Quebec in Ottawa, Pierre Trudeau can point to the 67 Quebec seats he has.

Quebec has given the Liberals a majority of its federal seats in every election this century except the 1958 Diefenbaker sweep, and has found itself in opposition at times in the past.

But this is the first time since the rise of the Quebec independence movement in the 1960s that the voting gulf with the other provinces has appeared so wide.

"If people hadn't realized there were two nations before the election, they had better start thinking about it right away," provincial Liberal leader Claude Ryan said as results came in.

Ryan repeated his attacks on Trudeau's proposal to patriate the constitution, but also said Clark's constitutional positions "did not shine with clarity."

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque kept himself unavailable for comment Tuesday night, but with the Quebec independence referendum approaching, the opposition status of most Quebec federal MPs is something he can hardly fail to exploit.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Pierre Trudeau marked the beginning of the end of his 11 years as prime minister early today with the recommendation that Conservative leader Joe Clark form the next government of Canada.

With the class that has always marked his best performances, the prime minister served notice he has no intention of an early departure from the Liberal leadership. He promised to be "a pretty good leader of the opposition."

"I will continue to fight vigorously, happily and joyfully in opposition," he told a crowd of some 600 supporters gathered in the Chateau Laurier Hotel.

"Defeat will help us to toughen up," he said, adding "I have no intention of giving up." "Within two, and at most three days, I will be meeting my colleagues, those who have formed the cabinet with me, as many of the caucus members as possible and deciding on the future of the government," Trudeau said.

"I want to tell you verh seriously and I'm very encouraged by your feelings that I think it is my duty at this time to recommend to my colleagues that we hand the government over," the prime minister said.

He would "recommend to the Governor-General that he ask Mr. Clark to form a government," Trudeau said.

"Mr. Clark will know his duty and I take it he will want to seek the confidence of Parliament in good time."

Trudeau, facing the decimation of his cabinet and an almost complete lack of support outside of Quebec, assured the chanting crowd that "we'll see victories in the not too distant future."

Referring back to the eight-week election campaign in which he made patriation of the constitution a major issue, he said he was "absolutely certain" that such a policy is the course Canada will have to follow.

"The main thing is that we haven't given up a thing on our principles as Liberals," he said, repeating that minority language rights, a major element in the Liberal's constitutional position, would remain a party strong point.

Speaking in French, the prime minister admitted that "our programs and policies were not the ones the people wanted to vote for."

But he asserted "we are in the process of pulling together a great coalition of Canadians that believe in Liberal principles."

"This country will need us in the future," Trudeau said.

Conceding defeat, the prime minister neglected to mention the ministers in Ontario whose personal political careers ended Tuesday night.

The prime minister claimed that Liberal upset wins in two Ottawa ridings indicated the federal bureaucracy backed his party's language policies.

But, in fact, the two Conservatives — Jean Pigott in Ottawa Carleton, and Robert de Cotret in Ottawa Centre — were more likely sacrificed because of the Conservative plan to reduce the public service by 60,000 over three years through attrition.

The prime minister delayed his appearance at his election headquarters in the hotel until almost all results were in from British Columbia, where the result was finally decided.

Trudeau spent most of the evening after dinner closeted at his official residence, 24 Sussex Drive, with two or three close aides and two or three cabinet ministers.

The aides were Principal Secretary James Coutts, his executive assistant Allan Lutfy, and Senator Keith Davey, the Liberal campaign chairman.

Coutts would not reveal who the ministers were but one of them was certainly campaign co-chairman, Justice Minister Marc Lalonde.

Following the prime minister's speech the justice minister told reporters there was no question of the Liberal leader stepping down hastily.

He reminded them that the party's constitution called for a vote by party members on a possible leadership convention after an election. But that had to be taken at the regular biennial meeting and that could be as long as 18 months away.

Coutts, who has been with Trudeau since the 1974 election, told reporters "the Liberal Party doesn't cast people aside."

The Trudeau aide rejected suggestions that the vote results indicated a sharp polarization of the electorate, with the Liberals almost wiped out west of the Ontario-Manitoba border.

The crowd at the hotel had waited silently, almost glumly, until the prime minister arrived shortly before 1 a.m.

His presence inspired cheers and brought back some of the enthusiasm that had existed earlier in the evening while the heavy Liberal win in Quebec was being listed by the television networks.

Trudeau told them that all the news "wasn't bad."

"I obviously have your friendship and support," he said to loud hurrahs, which obviously won't be his last.

He said "The really good news is that democracy is still full of vitality in Canada.

"Citizens voted in a free way," he said, adding whimsically "though the results were somewhat undesirable."

Ont. voters knock stuffing out of cabinet

Canadian Press

A powerful anti-government wave swept away 13 Liberal cabinet ministers in English Canada Tuesday, leaving nine members of Prime Minister Trudeau's inner circle high and dry as survivors in Quebec.

The list of Liberal casualties began to take shape early in the night as Dan MacDonald, 61-year-old minister of veterans affairs, lost his Prince Edward Island seat of Cardigan in a Tory sweep of the island province's four seats.

Quebec Liberals, including Prime Minister Trudeau and nine cabinet ministers, held strong. But Social Credit leader Fabien Roy captured the Eastern Townships riding of Beauce from Liberal incumbent Yves Caron.

"I'm going down to the manpower office in the morning to see what they have on the boards," said Defence Minister Barney Danson, 58, one of the first to go down under the Conservative onslaught in Toronto.

Danson headed a list of defeated area cabinet ministers that included Labor Minister Martin O'Connell; Norm Cafik, minister of multiculturalism; Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie; John Roberts, Trudeau's secretary of state; Tony Abbott, minister of national revenue and small business; and Hugh Faulkner, minister of Indian affairs and northern development.

In Southwestern Ontario, Judd Buchanan, president of the treasury board, held on for the Liberals in London West as did Agriculture Eugene Whelan.

But Bud Cullen lost the Sarnia riding he had held since 1968 to Conservative Bill Campbell.

Prominent Liberals fared better in Northern Ontario. Economic Development Minister Robert Andras was re-elected in Thunder Bay-Nipigon and John Reid, minister of federal-provincial relations held on in Kenora-Rainy River after a see-saw battle with John Parry of the NDP.

Liberal speaker James Jerome held off an NDP assault in Sudbury where pundits had predicted he might have trouble because of critical remarks Trudeau had made about Inco Ltd. workers involved in a bitter strike in the nickel city.

Cabinet material aplenty . . . except from Quebec

Canadian Press

With two exceptions, the people who Joe Clark had been expected to call on to form a Conservative cabinet were elected Tuesday night.

The losers were Robert de Cotret and Jean Pigott in Ottawa. De Cotret, former head of the Conference Board in Canada and slated for a senior economic post in Clark's government, was defeated by Liberal John Evans in Ottawa Centre.

But Clark has plenty of material in his caucus to choose from — with the exception of French-speaking Quebecers.

Clark appears to have a choice of two persons for the contoversial position of finance minister — Sinclair Stevens, the financial critic of the last Parliament, and John Crosbie, former Newfoundland finance minister.

Here are some other names and possibilities:

— Walter Baker, of Ottawa, likely will keep his job as Conservative House Leader and possibly will be president of the Privy Council — Flora MacDonald of Kingston, Ont., has been inter-governmental affairs critic. She has the credentials to take any of several portfolios.

— Harvie Andre of Calgary is treasury board critic and a personal friend of Clark so is certain to get a senior post.

— Don Mazankowski of Vegreville, Alta., transport critic, could be considered for the powerful transport ministry that was held by defeated Otto Lang.

— Allan Lawrence, is energy critic and a former Ontario attorney-general so there are several choices for him.

— James McGrath of St. John's, Nfld., is social affairs critic but is in a difficult position. If performance in the Commons is any guide, he should be in the cabinet. But Crosbie is expected to be the one Newfoundland cabinet minister.

— Lloyd Crouse of South Shore, N.S., almost certainly will be fisheries minister.

— Roch LaSalle of Joliette and Heward Grafftey of Missisquoi are the Tories' only two Quebec MPs. They should enter the cabinet along with Senator Jacques Flynn, leader of the tiny Conservative group in the Senate.

— David MacDonald of Egmont, P.E.I., cultural and women's affairs critic, is a good bet for state secretary.

— Lincoln Alexander of Hamilton, Ont., is the only black MP and is manpower and pension critic. He probably will land in the cabinet somewhere.

— John Fraser of Vancouver is labor critic and probably will become labor minister.

— Perrin Beatty of Fergus, Ont., made a name for himself as a critic of the revenue department and Loto Canada.

— Jake Epp of Provencher in Manitoba, immigration critic.

— Steve Paproski of Edmonton, Conservative whip and one of the few caucus members who supported Clark's leadership bid from the start, is probably ready for a reward.

— Allan McKinnon of Victoria, defence critic, will probably become defence minister.

Pity the poor Rhinoceros!

QUEBEC (CP) — When a party runs on a platform of repealing the law of gravity, you know it isn't out to curry favor with the electorate by making easy promises.

So it was not surprising that few Canadians could find it in their hearts to support the Rhinoceros Party in Tuesday's federal election. Not that it mattered, since the Rhinos had vowed not to keep any of their campaign promises.

Once a purely Quebec-based phenomenon, the party ventured into English Canada for the first time this year since it started contesting general elections in 1965, fielding three candidates in Ontario and one in British Columbia to go with the 59 in this province.

It didn't take any seats, but a final tally in which both Conservatives and Liberals seemed hard-pressed to form a government was ready-made for a party which thrives on satirizing Canada's political system.

Charles McKenzie, billed as the Rhinos' national campaign director, immediately dispatched a message to Governor-General Ed Schreyer advising that his party was "prepared to accept the will of the people and ready to aid in the formation of the next Parliament."

If nobody should answer the phone at Rhino headquarters in Montreal, he advises the governor-general, "leave your name and number and we'll get back to you."

Of all the wooing Clark's was found the best

Times News Services

TORONTO — Metropolitan Toronto voters delivered their crucial support to Joe Clark's Progressive Conservatives on Tuesday electing Tories in 12 of Metro's 23 key ridings.

Wooed to the end by Clark, Pierre Trudeau and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, Metro voters made their choice — in the process knocking off three Liberal cabinet ministers.

The Liberals took 10 Metro seats — three less than at dissolution two months ago and seven less than in the 1974 federal election.

The New Democrats, who were hoping to make major inroads in Metro, lost one of the two seats they held at dissolution.

Ironically, the Grits recaptured two seats they lost in the byelections — bringing Eglinton-Lawrence and Parkdale-High Park back into the Liberal fold.

New Democrats also had expressed high hopes last week, saying Broadbent's showing in the debate and the Toronto Star's endorsement of the party would increase their popularity and standings.

The NDP hung on to Broadview-Greenwood but lost in the Beaches where it had expected to retain the seat.

Meanwhile, 16 years of faithful support for the Conservatives paid off for the Prairies Tuesday night as the region finally found itself with a major share in the next federal government.

Decisively rejecting federal Liberals for the ninth consecutive general election, Prairie voters gave 38 of their 49 seats to the coming government of prime-minister-elect Joe Clark, more than a quarter of his total.

As most of the rest of the country fell back in step with the Prairies, which opted for John Diefenbaker in 1957 and remained largely loyal to the Conservatives during the Pearson and Trudeau years, the region could look forward to having a native Albertan as prime minister, with a good selection of cabinet posts for other Prairie Conservatives.

The Conservatives took all 21 Alberta ridings, 10 of Saskatchewan's 14 and seven of Manitoba's 14. The NDP took four in Saskatchewan and five in Manitoba.

There was little consolation for the vanquished Prairie Liberals — all four seeking re-election went down to defeat. Transport Minister Otto Lang, once the political strongman of the area, placed third in Saskatoon East while flamboyant cowboy and Industry Minister Jack Horner was so far behind in Crowfoot that he lost his candidate's deposit.

Joe: What's the new PM really like?

By JOHN MARSHALL
FP News Service

Canada has a new prime minister. It's not a question of Joe Who, it's a question of Joe What. What's he really like?

Theoretically, it is more difficult to answer that question of a Pierre Trudeau, an actor of varied moods, arrogance and chill withdrawal, exhibitionism and aloofness; a man of philosophical musings, uncontrolled anger; a romantic who sniffs flowers, a despot who calls out the troops; a socialist to the ultra-conservatives, a reactionary to the left-wingers.

It's more difficult and yet, in the very inventory is the personae of the man; an erratic intellectual, a pragmatic politician, a person of passions.

Joe Clark?

No matter what the setting, there seems to be no surprises, no wide swings of mood, no public speculation, no thinking out loud. Very soon, somehow you get the feeling you've known this man or his counterpart before. But here has been the potential leader of a country. How could you have known his like? Somehow there surely has to be a special characteristic to have put him at this level in our power structure.

What is he like? First, a minor thing — minor to the public that is, not to the press who followed him and the other leaders for two exhausting months. There is a specific atmosphere to the Clark plane (and the plane, not the ever-changing hotels, become the only continuity, home if you will, on these close to absurd exercises.)

On the other two planes, particularly the Ed Broadbent one, there is little semblance to commercial flights. They look like old-time newsrooms with clippings and pictures pasted up. Staff and journalists do volunteer cabin crew duties. There's s no formality. A Mountie, jacket off, gun showing in open holster, incongruously hands out the hors d'ouvres. His handcuffs hang from the luggage rack, maybe with flowers stuck in them.

However on the Clark plane, as in all commercial airlines, passengers are told to put their seat back and tables in an upright position at takeoff and landing. Even a Clark aide might tell a deadline-harrassed writer working at his table to put it up. There's a neatness to it all.

There is, in the non-vituperative sense, an old-fashioned aspect to the man from High River. Rules and regulations are something to respect.

The old verities are a part of him. But they seem so, not so much through thought out conviction, but more in the way a hawk silhouette is imprinted on a bird. He is not a rebel, nor a philosopher.

Clark is impatient with theorizing and academic exercises. He's a pragmatic politician and has been since he did staff work at the age of 21. Politics to him is an all-consuming obsession based on what he sees as its practicalities, ranging from the detailed reorganization of his party's policy structure to the assiduous applications of the arts of getting elected.

It makes him sound like a humorless man. He is not.

One thing he is though. He's an optimist.

"He comes out of a bad day, like that really tough one in Quebec during the campaign ..." He keeps talking about "tough" and "really tough" and "really tough on the leader."

You feel that even the resilient Gillies still bears the scars of trying to campaign against all odds with things going wrong. "But he comes out of a day like that, or maybe out of just a bad meeting where things didn't work, and the first thing he does is want to talk immediately about what comes next, what's slated for tomorrow.

The Clark security blanket is the future.

It's a simplistic approach to live, but it is not an uncommon one for those with stubbornly sought goals. And it is here where one finds his counterparts — the man determined to work his way up to the top of his service club association, the professional unionist, the corporate management type.

This is where you often see the Joe Clarks, the same self centred determination, the same kind of men who seem to be able to talk about nothing except their association, union or business. On the side, like Clark, there may be some knowledge about popular movies, novels, and sport.

Often they reach the top in their field not through any brilliance (Clark says he does not consider himself an extraordinary man) or even great leadership qualities. But they get there through a determined persistence, through always being there, and usually with an addition of luck. In the Clark case, the Conservative Party, fortuitously in disarray, was his club-union-business.

There is the one difference, leadership in the area he selected can lead to leadership of a country.

It is not so much a case of trying to analyse what is the real Joe Clark, it would be of much greater relevance to analyse what it is that makes Joe Canada select the Joe Clarks of their clubs, unions, businesses — and political parties.

His aides talk about his stamina, his aptitude for getting people to work together and his readiness to accept ideas from others — and of his ability to grow.

The future can be the electors' security blanket, too. Maybe their choice can grow into the awesome responsibilities of the job.

Ballot Boxes Probed

TORONTO (CP) — Complaints that the seals were broken on two ballot boxes in the Toronto riding of Parkdale-High Park are being investigated by the RCMP, but police said today there were probably no irregularities.

S.Sgt. Glen Smith of the RCMP said police are trying to determine whether the ballot boxes — at two polling stations — were sealed properly.

The seals — metal strips that snap into place — have to be cut to be opened. But Smith said the seals on the two ballot boxes were not cut.

"At this point I don't think there were any irregularities," Smith said.

Complaints that the boxes were not sealed were made by people in charge of the two polling stations, he said.

NEW YORK (CP) — Her companions tried to shut her up, but Margaret Trudeau likes to talk — even from a moving cab.

It was 4 a.m. today when the estranged wife of the defeated prime minister and two burly companions rushed out of Studio 54 into the waiting taxi.

At closing time, her companions shuffled her into the cab and it started to move, back door open, as she tried to talk in reply to a reporter's questions.

Mrs. Trudeau managed a few words of praise for her husband of six years before they were separated two years ago.

She was muzzled somewhat when asked the question whether for her own sake and the future of their three sons, she was happy that he had lost Tuesday's federal election.

"I think he's the most wonderful man in the world," she said. "He will be the finest leader of the opposition the world has known."

One of her companions — a heavily bearded individual — kept insisting that she had no comment about the election.

But Margaret managed a few more words before the trio took off — the reporter's body half in the cab and the wheels starting to move.

"He hasn't lost anything," she said of the defeat of Trudeau's Liberal government at the hands of Clark's Progressive Conservatives.

"He's won," she insisted. "He's the winner."

She said she is certain that as opposition leader, Trudeau will stay on and fight.

In a recent television talk show interview in New York, Mrs. Trudeau said she was of two minds about the political fate of her husband.

"For our country, I would like him to win," she told talk show host Phil Donahue, "For our little boys, I would like him to lose."

She explained that it might be better for their sons if he lost because he would be able to devote more of himself "as he wasn't able to do to me in our marriage."

Mrs. Trudeau has spent several weeks in New York promoting her new book, Beyond Reason.

Lucky Thirteen Elected

Canadian Press

Thirteen women were elected to the House of Commons Tuesday, an all-time record, although they represent only a small proportion of the 195 who sought seats in the federal election.

Their number exceeded by three the total at dissolution, when there were seven Liberals and two Progressive Conservatives in the House. And it was four more than the previous high of eight elected in 1974.

Three women members of the last Commons were losers: Iona Campagnolo, the Liberal minister of fitness and culture, who was beaten in the British Columbia riding of Skeena; Jean Pigott, who won a byelection for the Conservatives in Ottawa-Carleton last October, and Simma Holt, who earned a reputation as an outspoken MP during seven years in Parliament. Mrs. Holt was defeated in Vancouver Kingsway.

The Liberals elected nine women, the Conservatives two and the New Democratic Party two.

The New Democrats hadn't had a woman in Parliament since Grace MacInnis who represented Vancouver Kingsway until her retirement in 1972.

Poll-by-poll across Canada

(CP Copyright)

Following are results of voting in the federal general election as compiled by The Canadian Press.

Redistribution in 1976 increased the number of seats by 18 to 282. Only 16 of the 264 constituencies in 1974 remain the same.

Legend: L — Liberal; PC — Progressive Conservative; NDP — New Democratic Party; SC — Social Credit; Comm — Communist; Marx-Len — Marxist-Leninist; UP — Union Populaire; Rhino — Rhinoceros Party; Nat — Nationalist Party of Canada; Ltn — Libertarian Party; Ind — Independent; x — member of last House.

Minority gov't: Que. outvoted feat of Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald.

But that did not indicate the scope of the disaster that was to befall the Liberals in Ontario, where eight cabinet ministers went down.

Clark, the country's 16th prime minister and at age 39 its youngest, promised to start work immediately to strengthen the economy and generate growth and jobs.

He came out on top despite Trudeau's claims that Conservative spending plans would drive inflation through the roof.

The Progressive Conservative election victory is not expected to pose any problems for Canadian-American relations, U.S. officials said today.

The election results brought no immediate reaction from the White House.

One possibility for differences between the two countries stems from a Clark campaign promise to move Canada's embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to disputed Jerusalem.

The United States always has resisted Israeli pressure to do this.

In Britain, the two London evening tabloids, however, devoted most of their front pages to the event.

The News, in a secondary headline, stated:

"Canada's premier ousted after 11 years by Honest Joe, aged 39."

In its story from Toronto, The News said:

The Canadian High Commission threw a party for invited guests which began at Canada House about midnight and went on well into the morning as results poured in from a CBC feed.

The News says Trudeau gradually "lost the affection of Canadians because of his arrogance which meant he virtually ran a one-man government."

Lance faces 22 counts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bert Lance, the country banker who was President Carter's budget director before past financial dealings came back to haunt him, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on banking irregularity charges.

The Justice Department announced the indictments by a grand jury in Atlanta, which had been investigating the case since Jan. 24, 1978. Lance, 47, was indicted on 22 counts of conspiring to commit banking violations, including defrauding the government.

Lance and three other persons were named in the indictment. The indictment chrged they conspired to defraud the government by influencing 41 banks to make $20 million in loans to themselves.

Also indicted were Tom Mitchell, a Calhoun, Ga., businessman, Richard Carr, former president of Northwest Georgia Bank of Ringgold, Ga., and H. Jackson Mullins, a former Calhoun, druggist.

Lance served as budget director for 242 days before resigning in September 1977 after previous questionable financial dealing found their way into the spotlight.

Oil for U.S. 'diverted to Europe'

Times News Services

U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Tuesday in Paris there was "substantial evidence" that petroleum products that normally would be going to the United States have been diverted to Europe by oil companies looking for higher profits.

While Schlesinger did not name the companies involved, he indicated in an interview that he was talking about oil companies that have refineries in the "West Indies" outside American jurisdiction.

He also said that while the evidence pointing to a diversion of oil was not solid enough to take to court, he had no doubt that in recent months the United States has "had difficulty obtaining our fair share" of the world petroleum supply.

He did not elaborate on the nature of the evidence.

Schlesinger, who has been attending a meeting here of energy ministers from the 20 countries that belong to the International Energy Agency, conceded that his own pressure on American companies to stay out of any bidding war for uncommmitted oil in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, "could have been a factor" in the recent oil pinch in the United States.

Rotterdam is the world's major market for oil that is not tied up by long-term contracts.

European Common Market Energy Commissioner Guido Brunner recently said "some oil was attracted here by the higher price paid in Europe." Privately, U.S. officials have said that 200,000 barrels a day were involved.

In Washington today, Democrats in the House of Representatives shouted their opposition to President Carter's decision to lift price controls from domestically produced oil.

The action came after the caucus rejected 124 to 96 an attempt at a compromise by White House allies.

The compromise would have urged the president to keep controls on oil at least until Congress enacts a so-called windfall profits tax to keep oil companies from profiteering from deregulation.

'Rifkin plot' arrests made

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI has described an alleged $2.8-million computer fraud involving two Canadian citizens as a "kind of Stanley Rifkin plot."

FBI special agent Herbert Clough said Tuesday that Barry Berenbaum, a 49-year-old salesman from Vancouver, was arrested Monday in Los Angeles and charged with plotting to transfer the money between the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Crocker National Bank in Los Angeles.

In Vancouver, the RCMP arrested Marguerite Louise Baxter, a 32-year-old part-time employee of the Canadian bank.

"It's similar to a kind of Stanley Rifkin plot," said FBI spokesman John Morrison.

Rifkin, a 33-year-old computer expert, was sentenced March 27 to eight years in prison for masterminding a $10.2-million bank theft from Security National Bank in Los Angeles.

Once a computer consultant for the bank, Rifkin stole the money by learning a series of secret codes that gave him access to the bank's wire transfer room. He ordered the money sent to a Swiss bank.

Rifkin then flew to Switzerland, where he converted the bulk of the money into diamonds and returned to the U.S. He was arrested last November at the home of a friend near San Diego, Calif.

Clough said that Berenbaum, while still in Canada, made contact with an undercover FBI agent in Los Angeles on May 15 and proposed the unauthorized wire transfer.

Berenbaum told the agent he knew someone at the Bank of Nova Scotia who was knowledgeable of bank transfer codes and would wire the $2.8 million to Los Angeles.

Pacific Press talks back on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Formal negotiations between representatives of Pacific Press and the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions will resume this week without a mediator, council spokesman Phil Needham said Tuesday.

Negotiations broke off May 16 when mediator John Kagel, a California lawyer, withrew from talks and resigned.

The strike-lockout began Nov. 1 when two unions went on strike and four other unions were locked out by the company, which produces the morning Province and evening Sun newspapers.

Needham said the talks will involve wages. The company earlier had proposed a 29.66 per cent wage increase by May, 1981, plus further increases in fringe benefits. A senior reporter earned $395 a week under the previous contract.

There are six unions representing 1,400 employees at Pacific Press, but the Pressmen's Union dropped out of the joint council April 23 after a confidential report by Kagel said pressmen must alter their stand on a manning clause if the dispute was to be resolved.

"Since we got our JCBs our production has doubled!"

George Frantzen, owner of Alpine Contracting in Lillooet, speaks from experience. He owned three different makes of competitive machines before he acquired his two JCB Backhoe Loaders.

The verdict: "nothing can compare with them for versatility and production". The result: doubled production. The reason: heavy-duty quality and precision engineering with more factory-built attachments than any other machine in their class.

There's almost no end to the ways these JCB machines can turn a profit for you. Choose from a range of loader buckets, excavator buckets, jaws and bulldozer blades; give yourself more can-do capability with a multi-purpose clamshovel, fork lift, roadbreaker, ripper tooth, extending dipper, backfill blade, jib crane, square hole bucket, ditching bucket or bucket fork lift. You get virtually full fleet productivity for the price of a single machine.

And versatility is only part of the story. These are rugged machines, built around a tough, rigid, one-piece integral steel frame. They give you narrow-space manoeuverability, high breakout force, better hydraulics, and advanced operator comfort and visibility . . . all backed by Finning service and parts availability, no matter where you're working.

California couple simmered to death — coroner

VENTURA, Calif. (UPI) — A retired U.S. Navy officer and his wife are believed to be the first Americans to simmer to death in an overheated hot water spa, of the kind that has become increasingly popular in California.

Deputy Coroner Margot Martin ruled that Wesley La Roza, 58, and his wife Helen, 53, passed out and died of extreme overheating as they relaxed in the spa at their home in Simi Valley, Calif.

Medical sources said there have been no previous reports of such deaths in the hot tubs and fiberglass spas which began gaining popularity in California several years ago and are now spreading across the nation.

"I've never heard of this before," said Frank Chapel, science editor of the American Medical Association news, adding that he usually hears quickly about unusual causes of death.

The bodies of the La Rozas were found by a neighbor May 15 in the spa on the patio of their home in the Los Angeles suburb. Both were wearing bathing suits and appeared to have been dead for about a day.

The water temperature was 110 degrees Fahrenheit when they were found and had probably been higher hours earlier, investigators said.

"Usually, if body temperature rises over 105 degrees, you're in serious trouble," Chapel said.

The temperature "was far too high," said Don Berliner, first vice president of the International Spa and Hot Tub Institute, who said he was "shocked" by the deaths. Berliner, president of a Santa Ana, Calif., spa manufacturing firm, said most manufacturers include warning with their products against such temperatures.

The deputy coroner said the couple apparently relaxed in the spa, fell asleep, passed into comas and died of hyperpyrexia — overheating, such as is caused by heatstroke — without awakening. La Roza was a retired Navy lieutenant commander.

Investigators at first suspected a double suicide, but found no traces of poison or drugs, she said. They had not been drinking, she said.

The hot water relaxation devices gained popularity in California in the late 1960s, and by the mid '70s many had been installed in apartment houses and middle-class private homes.

Most common in northern California is the hot tub, a large, barrel-like structure, usually made of redwood, in which bathers sit on a bench-style seat. Spas, more popular in Southern California, are usually made of fiberglass and often designed so that bathers lay back in a semi-reclining position.

Israelis strike back

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israeli warplanes today bombed suspected Palestinian targets about 10 miles south of Beirut today just hours after a bomb explosion in Israel killed two persons and injured more than a dozen others, Palestinian officials said.

The bomb, planted by Palestinian guerrillas on the roof of a bus station in the Tel Aviv suburb of Petach Tikva, killed three persons, including a mother and her baby daughter, and wounded 13 others, Israeli police said.

A police spokesman said the 33-year old woman and 18-month-old daughter died shortly after being brought to hospital. The third fatality — a woman — was among four seriously wounded people hospitalized after the blast. Ten other people suffered medium and light injuries.

The Palestine Liberation Organization news agency WAFA said the planes hit near the village of Damour, along the coast south of Beirut, about 6:20 p.m.

Honors for Wayne rushed by congress

The U.S. House of Representatives today approved legislation to strike a gold medal for cancer-stricken actor John Wayne. Under the legislation, the medal would be inscribed, "John Wayne, America." It now goes back to the Senate for approval. The House bill honoring Wayne, who is in a California hospital, was passed by voice vote with no debate. Only 31 other such medals have been authorized this century, going to such Americans as Jonas Salk, Charles Lindbergh, Walt Disney, Bob Hope, Robert Frost, the Wright Brothers and Robert Kennedy. Wayne, who will be 72 this week, has starred in more than 150 movies since his first in 1929, called The Big Trail.

SHELLEY HACK
. . . Charlie's new girl

JOHN WAYNE
. . . no argument

Charlie has a brand new angel — one who was his namesake in her last incarnation on the tube. Producers of ABC-TV's Charlie's Angels say they've signed Shelley Hack to replace Kate Jackson who leaves the show this fall. Miss Hack had a small role in Annie Hall, but she's best known to viewers as the "Charlie" girl of the Revlon commercials. She's the second Angel replacement since Cheryl Ladd subbed for Farrah Fawcett-Majors a year ago and she'll make her debut when the show begins its fourth season with an episode titled Angels in the Sun, to be shot next month in the Virgin Islands.

Bob Hope and his "road shows" follow thaws in diplomatic relations as surely as flowers follow the melting snow, and this time he's off on the "Road to China." Hope will head the first American variety tour ever on the Chinese mainland next month — taping it in Peking and Shanghai, showcasing top Chinese entertainers and giving Chinese audiences a first hand taste of Yankee humor.

Princess Anne visited port wine makers and drank a 164-year-old vintage on the first day of an official visit to Portugal. The princess was shown port cellars Tuesday in Porto, where the wine has been made for four centuries. She was given 100 litres of a wine made in 1977, the year of the birth of her son, Peter.

And finally, in Copenhagen, three cigar workers rolled up their sleeves and after 445 hours of rolling tobacco came up with a cigar either for the Guiness Book of World Records or Godzilla. The 9-foot, 2-inch, 60-pound cigar costing $17,620 was produced at the J.P. Schmidt Cigar factory in the town of Frederica in northern Denmark.

French cut aid over massacre

PARIS (Reuter) — France is suspending military aid to the Central African Empire until results of an inquiry into an alleged massacre of children there are known, the co-operation ministry said today.

A ministry press statement said the aid will not be resumed until a commission made up of representatives of five African states, set up at an Franco-African conference that ended in the Rwanda capital of Kigali Tuesday, has made its report.

France has a mutual-defence treaty with the Central African Empire, which occupies a strategic position bordering Zaire and Chad — both countries under external military threat.

French aid accounts for about half the entire national budget of the country, one of the world's poorest. Only military aid is affected by today's announcement. Other forms of assistance will be continued.

The French section of Amnesty International, the human-rights organization, reported that about 100 schoolchildren were killed by soldiers of Emperor Bokassa on April 18. Bokassa's government has denied the report.

The massacre reports were supported Tuesday by the Central African Empire's ambassador to France. Ambassador Sylvestre Bangui resigned and announced formation of a liberation front to end repression in his country.

Moro's murderer surrenders?

LISBON (Reuter) — A man claiming to have killed Italian Christian Democrat Leader Aldo Moro has surrendered to Portuguese officials, police said Tuesday.

The man, who said he was a Brazilian named Amilton Von Cunha, gave himself up Monday in Loures, north of Lisbon, police said.

The man said he was a second lieutenant in the Italian Red Brigades guerrilla group and claimed he had fled to northern Spain and later Portugal after killing Moro in March, 1978.

Police said the man was not carrying any documents or money when he gave himself up and that he said he had not eaten for three or four days. He showed no signs of mental disorder and was extremely well informed about the Moro case, they said.

Police said he is being held in Lisbon and would appear before an examining magistrate within the next two days. The Italian police and Interpol have been informed.

U.K. takes first steps to recognize Rhodesia

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain will send high-level emissaries to Rhodesia and to its black African neighbors to lay the groundwork for eventual formal recognition of the black-majority government of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, announced these as "the first significiant steps" Britain's new conservative government was taking to return Rhodesia "to legality in conditions of peace and of wide international recognition."

A senior foreign office diplomat, "traveling between London and Salisbury as often as the need arises," will go to Rhodesia and "stay there for as long as possible to maintain and develop the closest possible contact with Bishop Muzorewa and his colleagues and to report to me," Carrington said.

He identified the envoy as Foreign Office Undersecretary Derek Day, 51, who will leave for Rhodesia next week.

Another emissary, most likely a senior Conservative politician, will also travel to Africa to discuss the change in British policy with the British Commonwealth Nations in Africa and particularly the "front-line" black African nations around Rhodesia.

When Thatcher was asked in the House of Commons whether this emissary also would meet with Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, the Rhodesian guerrilla leaders operating out of neighboring countries, she said, "I have no announcement or statement to make on that."

The two emissaries will be a way for Thatcher's government to restore Rhodesia to legality, and end British economic sanctions against it with a minimum of damage to British relations with the rest of Africa.

Thatcher and Carrington said the Conservatives' concluded, based on a report from their own observers, that last month's election in Rhodesia was sufficiently free and fair to justify British recognition of Muzorewa's government — in place of the white minority regime of outgoing Premier Ian Smith that broke away from Britain in 1965.

"There has at last been an election in which every adult man and woman (in Rhodesia) has been enabled to cast a vote," and black majority government has been elected, Carrington said in announcing Britain's plans to the House of Lords. "It would be morally wrong to brush aside an election in which 64 percent of the people cast their vote."

The high commission of the 35 Commonwealth Nations — including Australia, Canada and former British colonies in Africa, Asia and the Caribbean — declared here last week that the Rhodesian election was a "gigantic fraud" and warned Britain against recognizing the Muzorewa government.

The Thatcher government has made it clear no formal action will be taken before the August meeting of the Commonwealth heads of government in Lusaka, Zambia, which Thatcher and the queen will attend. Britain's economic sanctions against Rhodesia come up for renewal in Parliament in November.

This morning, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance wound up his first series of talks with the British government, taking pains to avoid any outward signs of disagreement over the new British initiative.

But Vance and officials accompanying him made it clear the U.S. has no plans to join Britain.

Clark now on trial

Joe Clark has cleared the first hurdle. He has won the right to become prime minister of Canada.

Now a much longer, and probably much tougher job lies ahead of him. He must govern the country in circumstances that no one could describe as ideal.

He must lead a government that does not have a majority of the seats in Parliament — a situation that is often good for the governed in that it demands sensitivity and accountability but not one that is ever easy for the governors.

He must lead a government that gained a healthy plurality of seats in Parliament — 22 more than the Liberals at last count — but did not win even a plurality of the popular vote. Indeed the Liberals had a lead of four per cent in the popular vote, a factor that cannot help but take something away from the strength of Clark's mandate.

Perhaps most difficult of all, he must lead a government that has virtually no representation in French-speaking Canada. The magnitude of the Tories' defeat in the francophone parts of the country is enormous. Clark's party won only two seats in Quebec, and one of the them was the very English Heward Grafftey. The Tories lost also in St. Boniface, Man., a traditional French-Canadian seat that surprisingly went Tory during last fall's byelections.

It was also the vote of French-Canada that prevented Clark from gaining a plurality of the popular vote. In many Quebec ridings, Liberals were picking up 65, 70, and even 75 per cent of the vote in four or five-way contests. In a couple of Montreal ridings, for heaven's sake, even the Rhinoceros Party ended up ahead of the Tories.

This will be one of Clark's first challenges. When he forms a cabinet within the next couple of weeks, he will have to find ways of bringing Quebec into the inner circle of government despite the paucity of elected members. Throughout the campaign, Clark promised to do this by appointing prominent Quebecers to the Senate and then to the cabinet. He repeated that promise in his acceptance speech Tuesday night, and it is essential he find several high-calibre Quebecers ready to accept this challenge.

The situation is not, however, without historical precedent. In 1957, when John Diefenbaker formed his minority government, he had only nine Quebec representatives compared with the Liberals' 63 from that province. His success in the situation was such that less than a year later when he returned to the polls, the Tories picked up 50 Quebec seats compared to the Liberals' 25.

It is surely premature to suggest that the Liberal francophone/Conservative anglophone split means a political polarization of Canada along ethnic lines that will encourage the break-up of the country. Clark will have to tread carefully in this area, but if he handles it well, it could lead to increased success for him.

The minority position of the government will mean that Clark will have to tread carefully in other areas, undoubtedly a good thing for the country. Each of his key plans will have to win the approval of at least one other party. This should prevent him from dashing headlong into some of his more questionable economic schemes, particularly the ill-thought out proposal to make mortgage payments deductible from income taxes.

The message that English-Canadians sent was clearly that a change in government was needed, but not so clearly that they thought Clark was the man for the job. Doubts about his capabilities remain.

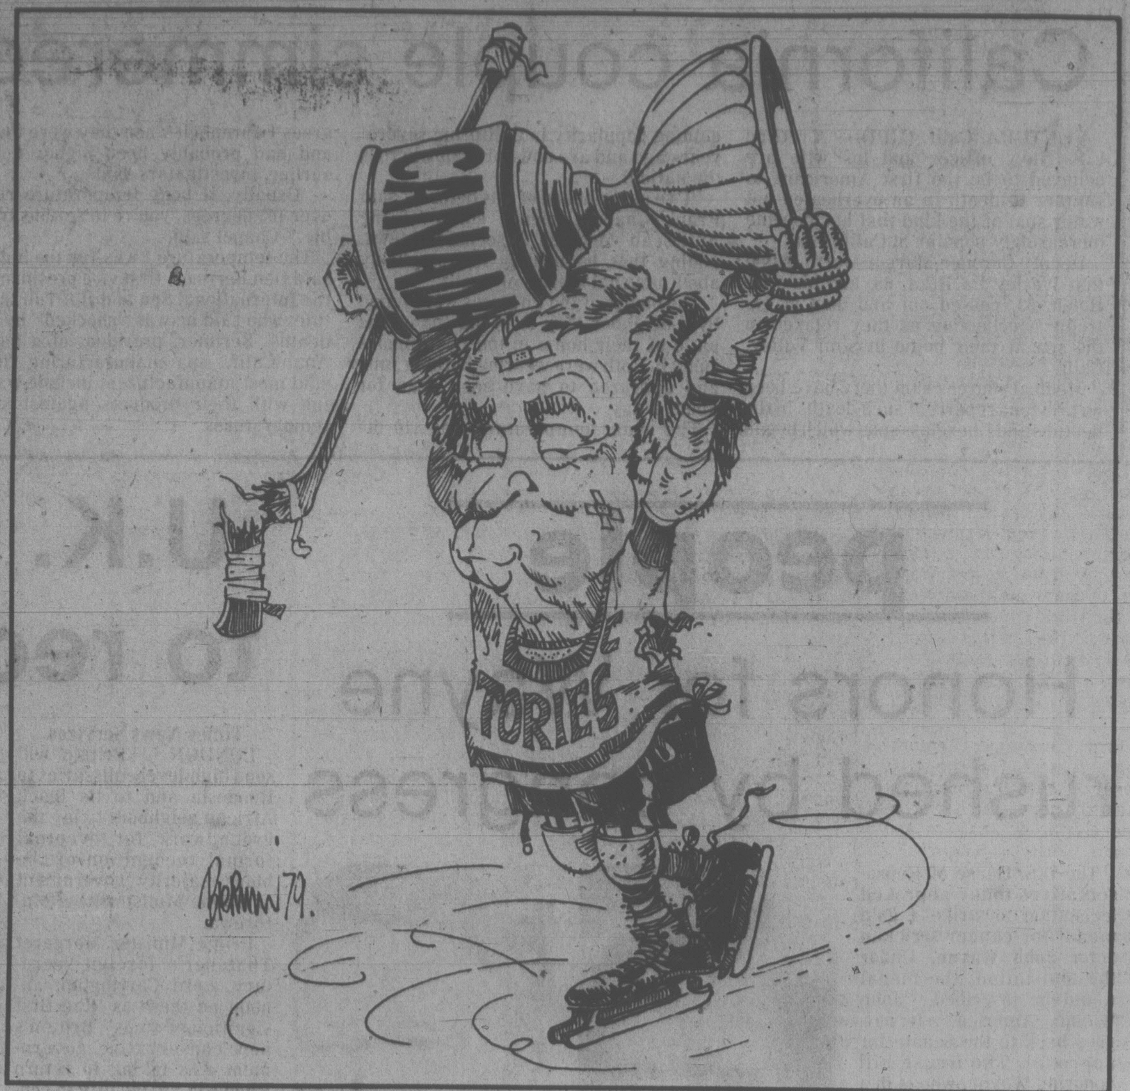
The surprisingly strong showing of the NDP west of the Lakehead is one indication that thousands of voters were unimpressed with both the Trudeau Liberals and the Clark Tories. The same phenomenon did not occur in Ontario, perhaps because the Tory message that a vote for the NDP was a hidden vote for Trudeau was put across more clearly there.

Clark must now have some concerns about those comments of a Liberal-NDP alliance. The way things turned out, he will have to persuade the NDP to support his policies. A Liberal-NDP alliance could spell hasty defeat for him.

The election of Clark as a minority prime minister has put him squarely on trial. He must convince the other parties and the Canadian public quickly that he will be able to grapple with the problems of national unity, inflation and unemployment that are uppermost in nearly everyone's mind.

Another quick election is not likely. For one thing, the Liberals are not likely to want to force a vote until they have reorganized their party somewhat after this election loss.

The constant possibility of a parliamentary defeat, however, means that Clark will always be in a position either to repeat Diefenbaker's outstanding success of 1958 or go down to ignominious defeat as leader of one of the briefest governments in recent Canadian history.



RICHARD GWYN

Giant goes down with grace

OTTAWA — The giant is down. Probably, he knocked himself down more than he was dragged down by the voters. Yet he is not out. Pierre Trudeau is still alive, well, and vital.

To his supporters in the Chateau Laurier Hotel ballroom, every now and then chanting "Tru-deau; Trudeau", or breaking into defiant cries of "Don't give up", Trudeau spoke first in English, and then in French. Then he ended, in English again, with a single, throwaway line: "For all its drudgery and broken dreams, the world is still a beautiful place."

A giant going down with grace.

Soon the spotlight will shift to Joe Clark, and will illuminate him with speculation about his cabinet, about his planned restructuring of government, and about his attempts to implement what he called "a victory for change."

Clark will deserve the attention. At 39, he is about to become the youngest prime minister in our history. He has established his mettle by accomplishing so much so young, and by surviving unscarred from so much personal abuse, from his political opponents and to a degree from the press, as any Canadian politician has had to endure in recent times.

Spotlight on Clark

Yet a second spotlight, almost as bright, will remain fixed upon Trudeau. The election results have turned him into a latter-day Wilfrid Laurier, a French-Canadian prime minister rejected by the country but still supported to the end by his fellow francophones, as happened to Laurier in 1917.

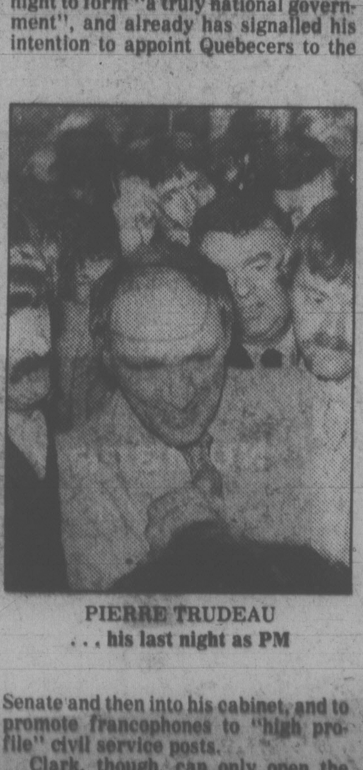
At least in appearance, Canada has become two political territories — one of Liberal red and the other of Conservative blue, broken by a few patches of New Democrat green.

Quebecers gave Trudeau every seat they could, 67 out of 75, and Clark as few as they could — two. Beyond Quebec's borders, francophones in northern New Brunswick, in eastern and northern Ontario, and in St. Boniface, Man., likewise gave Trudeau almost everything they had.

Conversely, among the 200-odd English-speaking ridings in the other nine provinces, Trudeau won fewer than 40, or less than one in five. Southwestern Ontario, the core of metro Toronto excepted, rejected him utterly. The west mowed down Trudeau's cabinet ministers, and left him with fewer than a half-dozen MPs.

We thus are left without any national party, neither among the Liberals, now about to become the official opposition, nor among Conservatives, soon to become the government.

Clark pledged himself on election night to form "a truly national government", and already has signalled his intention to appoint Quebecers to the Senate and then into his cabinet, and to promote francophones to "high profile" civil service posts.



PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . his last night as PM

Clark, though, can only open the doors of his government to Quebecers. To convince them to actually come in, or to persuade those already inside to stay, Clark needs Trudeau to send out signals to Quebecers for him. And so does the country need Trudeau — to tell Quebecers, as only he can do, that all of Canada still belongs to them.

Here's the irony of this election. By his actions in defeat, Trudeau could accomplish as much for the country as any of his achievements, and failures, of his decade in power.

By the close of the evening in the Chateau Laurier ballroom, the francophones among the Liberals were easy to spot. They stood together in knots, and were the first to utter dismayed cries of "Oh, no", when the early British Columbia results made it inevitable Clark would finish with an insurmountable lead rather than with a narrow margin that Trudeau might have been able to challenge.

In his valedictory speech, Trudeau sent out his first signals to these Francophone members of his own party. He mentioned Liberal successes outside of Quebec, in the maritimes and in metropolitan Toronto. He declared, "We've lost a campaign, but we will continue to fight for our principles."

Then, after conceding the result, Trudeau told his supporters what they'd been waiting to hear: "As for me, I think I'll be a pretty good opposition leader."

A pan-Canadian?

As opposition leader, which all Trudeau's closest aides are convinced he will remain through Quebec's referendum, and perhaps on through the next election, Trudeau will be able to prove to Quebecers that he remains a substantial political figure from one coast to the other. In advance of the referendum, he will be able to reassure Quebecers that he lost the election only because he was prime minister at the tag end of his term and not because he was a francophone. During the referendum he will be able to speak to Quebecers with the authority of a pan-Canadian politician.

"Be of good cheer, and don't be sad," Trudeau told his supporters, and through them the country. The polarization caused by the election, although inevitable from the campaign's beginning, indeed is sad. Yet there's no reason to be uncheerful about it, provided we grant Clark the tolerance to organize his government so that francophones can play a role in it that the electors did not grant them, and provided we grant Trudeau the tolerance to become again what he came to Ottawa to be — as close to a pan-Canadian political leader as it's possible for anyone to be.

Seat belts do save

I am writing in response to an article in which an Ontario coroner attributed three traffic deaths to wearing seat belts (Three Died Because of Wearing Seat Belts, May 9).

Despite the magnitude of proof that seat belts do help save lives and help prevent injuries I find it distressing that one article can infer that seat belts caused these three deaths, a sensational article because it implies previous facts concerning the effectiveness of safety belts are in question.

It states that the seat belts caused abdominal injuries resulting in death. It does not say it is estimated that the vehicle was travelling 30 kilometres per hour or 100 kilometres per hour, which does have a bearing on the force of impact.

What would have happened if they had not been wearing seat belts? Would they have lived? Others not wearing seat belts lived but where were they situated in the car? In the back seat?

The wearing of safety belts was made mandatory in 1978. Fatalities were down by 11 per cent in 1978 as compared to 1977, yet fatalities had been steadily increasing in previous years. I think that even the disbeliever must be convinced that seat belts must have some credit for this reduction.

There are many people crippled in traffic accidents who would say that they could well have avoided serious injury if they had been wearing safety belts.

Talk to the police who have attended traffic accident scenes and they will fully support seat belts. Talk to the B.C. Medical Association and you will find they endorse them.

Let us consider the positive sensational aspects of safety belts in saving lives and not blow a negative article, lacking support of fact, out of proportion by publicizing it from coast to coast.

Wear your seat belts properly, drive defensively and you will be much better prepared to avoid death and injury in our traffic scene. — K. J. Wyatt, Manager, Capital Region Safety Council.

We need coherent policy on food and agriculture, reader says.

Politics of food

Without food we die. We are well aware of that fact and yet for most of us in Canada the supply is so assured that we are concerned primarily with price and variety. A recent book by John W. Warnock entitled Profit Hungry — The Food Industry in Canada outlines some of the developments and dangers evident in the methods for supplying us with our three meals a day.

Probably the largest single factor is the concentration of business into the hands of a few companies. Apparently unrestricted "free enterprise" results in repeated takeovers until a few people at the head of large corporations control most of the industry. The influence of these large corporations is felt not only through the chains of retail stores but also through their wholesale supply companies and even down to the farms they own and control through contract farmers.

A large percentage of the takeovers and amalgamations involve subsidiaries of foreign companies and some of these manipulate their operations to benefit the parent company, not the Canadian subsidairy.

Some of the effects of the concentration of power are evident. The farmer is losing out to the marketing section as "between 1949 and 1973 the farm share of the consumers' dollar fell from 60 per cent to 37 per cent. The importation of goods produced by cheap or slave labor results in unemployment in our farm industry. Quality, taste and nutrition in foods are sacrificed for ease of handling, eye appeal and generally increased profits.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for the independent grocery store to survive and cases have been documented where a large chain carried out a program of reducing prices adjacent to an independent store to the point where the independent operation was finally driven out. In 1954 independent stores had 63 per cent of the retail food industry but this had dropped to 14 per cent by 1975.

Some conclusions:

☐ People on welfare or in the poverty category are really suffering as a result of increasing food prices.

☐ Wages are only "a small fraction of the price increase" (referring to food and beverage industry between 1968 and 1972 — Food Prices Review Board.)

☐ Marketing boards help the farmer to sell his product but are relatively powerless in dealing with the large food corporations.

☐ The federal Liberals have been tolerating or supporting the concentration of power and foreign takeovers. It is my impression too that the federal Tories are pretty well supported by the same large corporations although a Tory government might make some minor changes. The NDP have indicated a desire to reduce the power of the large corporations and Mr. Broadbent has been quite vocal on this issue.

The author raises the question of treating the production of food as one would a public utility as outlined in The Politics of Food by Don Mitchell but acknowledges that this would require a "virtual social revolution."

Are these the only two alternatives available to us — either a public utility or an economic dictatorship (probably with foreign domination)?

Is the NDP the only political party concerned about this situation and apparently willing to investigate it? — Ralph Morton, R.R. 1, Cowichan Station.

Help is available

On April 6 the Times published a syndicated article by Joan Watson: Some Compassion Needed in Pricing. While the importance of rehabilitation after a mastectomy is widely accepted, information concerning financial assistance is province-specific.

British Columbians may have been misled concerning financial aid available to them.

In B.C., assistance is available through pharmacare, some private insurance or extended benefit plans, the Canadian Cancer Society and the department of human resources.

Where substantiated by a physician's order pharmacare will provide assistance once yearly in the purchase of one breast prosthesis per mastectomy, two surgical brassieres and one lymphedema arm sleeve.

Full payment for the above will be made by pharmacare on behalf of those individuals living in B.C. 90 days, 65 years of age or older and also for any individual with a "W" plan card.

Proof of eligibility to the supplier may be provided through a Plan A pharmacare card of a valid B.C. Medical Services "W" Plan card.

Partial financial assistance for all other citizens consists of 80 per cent reimbursement to the individual for all expenses in excess of $100 in any given calendar year. The $100 deductible may represent or include all other eligible pharmacare expenses as well.

Canadian Cancer Society, where the $100 deductible proves a hardship, has funds available. — Mrs. Linda Andrews, Service to Patients Co-ordinator, Canadian Cancer Society, B.C. and Yukon Division.

Women take lead in East Germany

Communist rulers launch a great social experiment

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

DRESDEN, East Germany — The East German woman — worker, scholar, shopper and baby-producer — is at the centre of one of the world's most far-reaching social experiments that is unfolding in this tightly controlled Communist state.

Like her male counterpart, she still cannot speak out publicly against the prevailing political ideology or foreign policy set in Moscow, or travel to the West. But in many other ways she is the most emancipated in East or West and is coming to dominate important elements of the East German scene.

East Germany's continuing dilemma for the past several years has been that it needs more babies to stem a declining population, and more workers, especially skilled workers, to plug a lingering scarcity of labor. Since women contribute to solutions for both problems, they are the centre of attraction.

The East Berlin government, with German efficiency and conviction, has embarked on a variety of new projects and expanded some older ones that, taken in their totality, add up to an extraordinary effort to officially induce changes in the life-style of its citizens and the thoughts of its young people.

Although the government tends to portray this country as kind of a socialist paradise, it may be more of a paradise in the long run for sociologists studying human and governmental behavior.

There are four key elements to what is happening here:

1.The nationwide system of nursery school/day care centres is expanding as fast as the Berlin government can find money to subsidize them. Children as young as 10 weeks can be brought to these centres and be cared for from dawn until night while their mothers work. The cost to the mother is 60 cents a day.

About 60 per cent of all East German children under 3 are now in these centres, where they receive what seems to be excellent personal and medical care and the first dose of what directors call "learning the socialist way of life and work."

2. The 40 per cent of East German infants who are not in these centres generally are cared for at home by their mothers under a generous, newly expanded system of baby bonuses designed to induce women to have babies yet return soon to work. Thus, for a first child, a woman now gets six months off work at full pay. For her second child and any more she gets a full year off at full pay.

In addition, there is a $500 bonus for each child, smaller $10 to $25 monthly additions to income for each new baby, and loans of up to $2,500 that don't need to be paid back if enough children are produced.

The result is that after years of not only a decline in birth rate but a dropping population, East Germany's birth rate has climbed slowly but steadily since 1976. It jumped to a seven-year high in 1978 when 232,136 babies were born. That was just enough to eclipse the death rate and the country recorded its first population increase in a decade.

3. In contrast to the incentives to have children, East Germany also has what doctors here say is probably the most liberal abortion policy of any country in the world. The matter is strictly up to the woman, except when she is under 18, when her parents are consulted. The husband or father has no say in the matter, and a prospective mother can have an abortion at a state hospital simply by asking for one.

Typically, say doctors at a district hospital, about one in four East German pregnancies now end in abortion. While this seems contradictory to the state's baby-boom policy, officials say it contributes to keeping more women in the work force full time — without interruptions for pregnancy leave — and fewer unwanted babies.

The result of these three measures and their gradual expansion in recent years is that an estimated 81 per cent of East German women are now in the work force — believed to be the highest figure in the world.

Another result is that women control much of East Germany's schools and health services. The 900,00 children in nurseries and kindergartens are entirely in the hands of women. The overwhelming majority of East German teachers in elementary and high school are women and it is estimated that 60 to 70 per cent of the doctors and 80 per cent of the dentists are women.

When the large number of university-trained women with degrees in science and technology are added into this mixture, it produces a sense that many Western visitors here get, and that a number of East Germans tend to confirm in private conversation, that East German women today are the dominant force in their society.

4. The fourth element of government-ordered social policy, on the surface at least, does not appear to fit in with the other three. It involves an order, which went into effect last September, to introduce pre-military training into the ninth and 10th grades for youngsters 14 years or older. The action has been opposed sharply by the churches and, on the basis of some scattered interviews here, is not taken very seriously by many young people.

Yet, the order plugs a gap in the official ideological development of East Germany's teen-age generation between the end of formal schooling and the beginning of a career, and thus it can also be seen as a measure to refresh the mind of any youngster that wanders away from the socialist ideal and the need to remain vigilant against "Western imperialism."

Population has always been a special problem here, symbolically and practically. East Germany suffered a massive loss of population, including many skilled workers, in the immediate post-war years, when 2 million people of its 1949 population of 19 million fled to the West before the country sealed its borders and built the Berlin Wall in 1961.

Still, population dwindled from 17 million in 1968 to 16.7 million in 1977. The country had the lowest birth rate in the Communist Bloc.

East Germany, however, also has one of the world's highest divorce rates, stemming from a divorce law that makes little economic differential between men and women, since virtually all women are employed.

Freedom in the dark for Britons

ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

One of the great legal victories for freedom of the press in our time was won the other day by the Sunday Times of London. The European Court of Human Rights decided that the paper had been wrongfully restrained by the British courts from publishing the results of an investigation into the thalidomide drug disaster.

Thalidomide was the tranquilizer that, when taken by pregnant women, caused the birth of horribly deformed children. In 1972, ten years after the event, the Sunday Times prepared an article indicating that the distributor of the drug had not properly tested it. The article was banned as a contempt of court — because it supposedly might have affected damage suits brought by some of the victims years earlier and, though long dormant, still formally pending.

From the American viewpoint, the ban on that story was an extreme example of repressive British attitudes toward the press: Concern about prejudice in some old civil cases outweighed the need to public information about inadequate testing of drugs. The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution would of course have prevented any such restraint.

Britain has no constitution. But it has signed the European Convention on Human Rights, which guarantees "the right to freedom of expression" — with a caveat. Restrictions on expression are allowed if "necessary" for, among other things, "maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

In the European Court, Britain argued that that escape clause allowed the ban on the Sunday Times article. The court rejected the argument. It said that free expression was "one of the essential foundations of a democratic society," outweighing this claimed judicial interest in suppression. In the language of the covenant, it was not a "necessary" restraint.

The European Court reached that result by the narrowest of majorities, 11 to 9. But then the American Supreme Court divided 5 to 4 in its most important decision for press freedom: Near vs. Minnesota, which in 1931 established the presumption against prior restaints. The Sunday Times case could prove just as significant in the development of a European constitutional law of the press.

But it was a victory with a bitter taste for the reporters and editors and readers of the Sunday Times — which could not print a word about it. The paper and its sister, The Times, have been closed for more than five months in a struggle with the unions; and there seems little chance of their publishing again soon.

The management of Times Newspapers Ltd. shut the papers rather than go on with the union abuses that are traditional on Fleet Street. The practices are about as ripe as any in the industrial world. Some have recently been described in an article by the editor of the Sunday Times, Harold Evans.

There are, for example, "ghosts." A Fleet Street newspaper agrees with the union to have a certain level of manning for a job — say 100 typesetters. The paper pays for 100, but many fewer typesetters actually turn up: sometimes only 50. Those who come share out the pay of the missing "ghosts."

Agreements are made and immediately broken. Just before press time one union group or another threatens to walk out or go slow unless management comes up with an extra payment. The Sunday papers, whose existence depends on the presses rolling one night a week, are especialy vulnerable to such tactics. Usually, the papers pay up. Evans said some Fleet Street Linotype operators now make $800 a week.

A simple statistic shows the effect of the disruptive union tactics. By late April The Times had missed printing 23 million copies because of its shutdown. The other British dailies, still publishing, had in the same period lost 25 million copies.

Times Newspapers wanted assurances that agreements would be kept. It also wanted to introduce the computerized typesetting now common on American papers. Management offered to keep every present employee on until retirement, but the key union said no.

The situation at Times Newspapers is the more depressing because of the attitude of the political left in Britain — which is to give the unions total support despite their Ludditism and abuse of power. A recent issue of the New Statesman, the left-wing weekly, set a record for fatuousness even in its columns with a defence of the Fleet Street unions.

"We need, of course, to lower the cost of newspaper production," the New Statesman said, "for unless that is done new owners and new forms of ownership will not appear. But that cannot be done while the print unions are on the defensive; and they cannot be other than defensive as long as corporate power is allowed to treat the liberty of expression as a property right."

Was that a call for government newspapers? Or for even more complete surrender to union abuses? Freedom of the press requires not only constitutions and wise judges but political sense and courage.

Footmen rally against metric

By TOM FERRELL
New York Times

Seaver Leslie is five feet, 10 and a half inches tall, and hopes to stay that way till he dies. Leslie, an artist, is head of Americans for Customary Weight and measure, an organization dedicated to preserving the U.S. from the inhumane, imprecise and costly metric system. The other day, Leslie and the like-minded rallied in Central Park for a "Weight and Measure Festival" to celebrate foot and inch, gallon and gill, fathom and furlong.

Leslie and his friends are not alone. Last December, the General Accounting Office reported to Congress that enough metrication might be enough. Few Americans, the report said, understood the full implications of the changeover, which would make obsolete nearly every recipe book, map, nut, bolt and number in the whole country. The total costs, though unknown, would be enormous and so, for an indefinite period, would be the confusion. The report, while not damning the system, called for further consideration before the meter is woven inextricably into the fabric of American commercial and consumer life.

General Motors, which plans to be entirely metric by 1983, is not impressed. Neither is Donna Fiscus, editor of the American National Metric Council's biweekly newsletter, who says G.M.'s metrication costs, so far, have been about 1 per cent of their original estimate. The council offers advice to its industrial subscribers on how to switch without hitch.

The council is not an advocacy organization, officially, and neither is the United States Metric Board, a government body formed to ease the transition among those that are going aboard. But John Donnelly, its director of communications, points out that about 300 of the Fortune 500 companies have changed in whole or in part to the metric system. "Business doesn't do this for altruistic reasons. These companies are converting because they think there are bottom-line benefits," Donnelly says.

Aha, say last-ditch inchers, benefits indeed. And for whom? The council, says Americans for Customary Weight and Measure, represents big companies with a vested interest in conversion, looking forward to megabucks and gigamarks of new sales in tools and fasteners, metric bottle openers and pipe cleaners. Far more representative, in their view, is the National Federation of Independent Businesses, a group claiming 570,000 members whose average annual gross is less than $250,000. Last January, the federation polled its members and found 24 per cent for metric conversion, 69 per cent against, and 7 per cent undecided. Small businessmen, according to Fred Swain, the federation's legislative council, fear not only the direct costs of conversion, which eventually come to an end, but consumer resistance, which could last forever or until bankruptcy.

But economics is the least objection of people like Leslie. Mainly they just hate metrics because metrics are wrong. The foot corresponds to the human foot, the mile to a thousand paces. Customary measures, they say, are human and humane, unlike the icy meter, bestowed on the world by the same frosty French eggheads who tried to make today 24 Floreal of the year CLXXXVI. The foot is conveniently factorable by two, three, four and six, the meter not.

Metrication, Leslie believes, is "the prime example of centralized power at its absolute worst, bureaucrats and careerists building things, it's growing and festering, higher offices, more secretaries." What the metricators ignore at mankind's peril, according to Leslie, is that the foot and inch are based on cosmological constants, laid up by the wisdom of the ancients (This is explained in "City of Revelation," a book by John Michell, guest of honor at the foot festival. The foot, as well as the Egyptian royal cubit and the megalithic yard, are intimately bound up with Stonehenge, Plato, the New Jerusalem, Jesus, the number 666 and superior beings who formerly inhabited the earth).

Time, Leslie feels, is on his side, as are the rising numbers of Americans opposed to metrication in recent Gallup Polls. So are some scientists. Two years ago, a group of physicists at the University of Colorado petitioned the government to go slow on metrics because it isn't the best possible system. A perfect system would be based on some physical constant of the universe — the Colorado group proposes the speed of light — and numbers more adaptable to computers than the present decimals. One light-day, says Dr. David F. Bartlett of Colorado, is roughly the diameter of the solar system. That's awfully big, but by sheer good fortune, 10 to the minus-15th light days is within two per cent of an inch and would feel right at home in the sewing parlor. "It would be called a fifteenen," Dr. Bartlett says.

Chamber has shopping list for Ottawa

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce today said it will ask the incoming Conservative government to match a $2.5 million provincial grant so an enlarged version of the convention centre can be constructed this fall.

Federal money would create a fund of $5 million which would enable Victoria to construct a large trade-and-science centre as well as meeting hall on the former Reid site.

The chamber also unveiled a shopping list of other requests that will go to re-elected Tory MPs Allan McKinnon and Don Munro within a few days.

"Politics aside, this election was a victory for Victoria," chamber president Mel Cooper said.

"We have had difficulty getting our voice heard because we were working through two members of the opposition. But now they will be on the government side and possibly in the cabinet."

The shopping list includes upgrading of Victoria Airport, a pet project of Munro's, and expansion of military facilities at CFB Esquimalt, which McKinnon has favored.

"We are hopeful of getting action on some of these things now," Cooper said.

The chamber also is seeking the establishment of a harbor commission for Victoria, to aid in development of the waterfront.

Cooper said it had been frustrating to make these proposals to Ottawa in past years and get little response.

The years of being ignored, hopefully, are over.

Cooper said the business community need not be upset by the fact Canada once again has a minority government.

This will create a very competitive situation and, at the same time, there should be stability because Clark's minority position is very solid. He should be able to carry on for a long time."

Canadians are used to minority governments — there have been only three majority governments in the last nine elections — and the country can operate normally with the present situation, he said.

Chamber harbor director Arne Lane said Victoria has a good chance of getting a matching $2.5 million grant from Ottawa on the basis of a need for a trade exhibit centre here. Ottawa does not make funds available for convention centres but it does provide funds for trade centres.

Lane said that, if the Victoria request is granted, the city would look upon the provincial grant as going towards the convention portion of the complex and the federal grant as providing the funding for the trade centre.

The expanded design would also incorporate science and resource displays, Lane said.

"The convention centre will be constructed in any case but a grant from Ottawa would enable us to do so much more."

8.3% fee hike set for UVic

University of Victoria students face an 8.3 per cent hike in tuition fees in September.

UVic's board of governors decided Tuesday to increase fees per unit to $39 from $36 with a limit of $585 for the full-time standard course load of 15 units.

The same fee increase will also apply to the university's law school where anual fees will rise to $713 from $658.

UVic is the first of B.C.'s three universities to raise fees this year. Although universities set their own fees, there is seldom much difference between university rates.

University of B.C. has been discussing a 10 per cent increase.

When fees were increased in 1977, full-time enrolment dropped and only an increase in part-time enrolment has kept total enrolment up, she said.

The governors also passed a resolution from Petch asking the education ministry to increase assistance grants to students.

UVic student files libel suit

A third-year University of Victoria student has filed a libel suit in B.C. Supreme Court in connection with remarks made by a university faculty board reviewing an assigned grade given her in a music course.

Judith Rockwell, 36, of 814 Queens, is seeking unspecified general and punitive damages against the university and the three members of the review board, Martin Bartlett and Michael Longton of the music department and Dr. Peter Smith, dean of the faculty of fine arts.

The suit was filed in Supreme Court Friday.

In her action, Rockwell says a report on the board's findings, published by the university April 12, contains statements of defamatory libel.

She felt she deserved an A grade.

But the review board refused to assign her a higher grade.

Hot U.S. contenders due to race in 49th Swiftsure

Victoria's Inner Harbor will be jammed Friday as yachts gather on the eve of the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca sailing classics.

Some of the more than 400 boats entered will be in the 136.2-mile race out to the Swiftsure Bank and back while the others will be competing in the 75.6-mile Juan de Fuca race which goes to Clallam Bay on the American side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca and back.

HMCS Porte Quebec will be at one end of the start line and will be the rounding mark at the Swiftsure Bank. At the other end of the start line will be the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Richnond from Anacortes.

The Juan de Fuca boats will round the Canadian navy's YMT 10 (Yard Maintenance Tender) at Clallam Bay.

The boats will start racing in four waves, the first ones being Swiftsure boats racing under the Internatiomal Offshore Ruling handicap. They get their start gun at 9:10 a.m. At 9:25 a.m. Swiftsure boats racing with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings will start.

IOR Juan de Fuca boats will get their gun at 9:40 a.m. while PHRF boats racing in the 75.6-miler will start 15 minutes later.

The competitors are hoping for prevailing winds that should allow them to head out to Race Rocks and the strait on a beat, coming back on the home leg with colorful spinnakers flying. If the winds hold, the first Swiftsure boats should be arriving at the finish line near the Ogden Point breakwater on Sunday afternoon.

Competition will be keen and one of the local boats expected to be up with the winners is Ross Mathewson's Kotuku of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. She is a 41-foot Denis Choate design and has been doing well in races here and in Vancouver.

Paul Cote and Dick Purdy's Milltown, designed by Peter Hatfield of Vancouver, is another boat to watch. Known on the mainland as "the 41-foot cedar tree", she'll be racing under Royal Vancouver Yacht Club colors.

Another Vancouver boat that is expected to be a hot contender is Greg Knight's new 35-foot one-tonner Knightmare.

Another favorite is Alec Foley's Level Crossing. She was over-all winner of the Vancouver Area Racing Council series in 1978. John Dunfield's C and C 48 Discovery from Royal Van. is another Canadian boat that could do well.

The Canadian boats will be up against tough competition from the United States, not the least of which will be Buchan Summers' 12-metre Weatherly from Tacoma.

Another American skipper to watch is Bates McKee of Seattle, who will be helming his new Swan 41 Surtsey. Local sailors will remember when McKee captured the coveted Lipton Cup at Maple Bay in his old boat Adelante, three weeks after she was launched.

Dr. Brian Archer from the Tacoma Yacht Club is expected to do well in his Frers-designed 47-footer Chiron.

Aircraft will be keeping checks throughout the races so that boats' positions can be plotted on the master grid at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Among the boats helping to patrol the races will be Bob Smith's Scot Free, Gerry Williams' Shalimar and Paul Stenner's Pacific Pilot V.

The race to the Swiftsure Bank, 15 miles out in the Pacific Ocean, is credited with being the most challenging on this coast. The sailors can expect to run the gamut of weather conditions; from gale-force winds to drifters.

There has been only one fatality in all the 48 years of Swiftsure. That was in 1976 when Wilbur Willard of Seattle drowned when his 30-foot sloop Native Dancer was knocked down and swept onto a lee shore.

This year, as an added precaution, a Canadian armed forces' search and rescue Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox will be standing by until the race is completed. The helicopter, with two crews, will be based on the Naden parade ground of CFB Esquimalt for the race's duration.

New York

The market turned upward late Tuesday after the government reported that orders for durable goods fell 8.7 per cent in April for their sharpest decline in 11 years.

Analysts said the news was welcomed by investors in the hope that any slowdown in business activity will bring with it reduced inflationary pressures and lower interest rates.

But by mid-afternoon the advance had run out of steam.

NLT Corp. led the active list, up 1⅛ to $29¼ amid rumors of a possible takeover bid by Ashland Oil. NLT said it hadn't been approached by Ashland or any other company.

Norton Simon, also active, lost ⅛ to $15⅞. A 300,000-share block traded at $16.

The NYSE's composite index rose .02 to 56.67.

Foreign cars better? 'Snobbery'

By GUY DARST

DETROIT (AP) — Do foreign workers make better cars than North Americans, as many people believe?

"It's snobbery," a Chrysler vice-president once said. But even executives of the U.S. industry have enviously eyed the "fit and finish" of some imports and have said foreigners are more careful.

If it's true, is it the man on the assembly line who matters — or something else?

For months recently, buyers could get cars made abroad and in the U.S. that were, for all practical purposes, identical — the Volkswagen Rabbit. This is the first time it's happened since Rolls-Royce assembled a handful of cars here more than 50 years ago.

J.D. Power and Associates of Los Angeles sent questionaires to 1,000 buyers of each kind of gasoline-powered Rabbit. Replies came from 390 U.S. owners and 419 owners of the West German model.

Though the survey covered many topics, 42 per cent of owners of the U.S. model thought neither car offered an advantage. But only 22 per cent of the owners of the West German model thought there was no advantage to their model.

Thirty-four per cent of the U.S. owners thought one advantage of the West German cars was they were better built, offered better workmanship, or were built by more experienced workers. Fifty per cent of the owners of the West German Rabbit thought theirs offered those advantages.

When the question was put in terms of disadvantages, 38 per cent of U.S. owners thought the U.S.-built Rabbit had these: poor quality or workmanship, inexperienced workers, workers who didn't care about quality or a production system that lacked quality controls. Fifty-eight per cent of the West German owners thought the U.S. car had those faults.

On another question, 64 per cent of the German owners, against 49 per cent of U.S. owners, thought the workmanship on their cars excellent. And 59 percent of the German owners, versus 47 per cent of the U.S. owners, thought the body construction excellent.

But when owners were asked about mechanical problems, exactly half the German owners reported some, while only 43 per cent of the U.S. owners had any.

Tom MacDonald, spokesman for Volkswagen Manufacturing Corp., thinks the 50-43 split is not large enough to be significant. He says the U.S. plant consistently ties the German plants in the company's own internal monitoring of product quality worldwide.

"It's not just the U.S. worker. It's your methodology of production, quality assurance all along the line, including your suppliers, your inspection process — it's a commitment of manangement, basically, that we've made."

As for U.S. quality, "We knew it was going to be that way from day one. We have a very good work force."

Cecil Hampton, assistant director of Region 2 of the United Auto Workers, which covers VW's Westmoreland, Pa., plant, said, however, that VW was concerned at first, "but now they believe the American worker is as good as any."

Ford eyes 20% of Japanese firm

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. is discussing the possibility of buying about a 20-per-cent share in the Japanese auto-maker Toyo Kogyo Ltd., Ford said.

A statement in the name of Ford President Philip Caldwell said an agreement "would help both companies to participate more fully in business opportunities in the Asia-Pacific region, which we see becoming intraregionally dependent for the sourcing of vehicles, components and technology."

Toyo Kogyo makes Courier pickup trucks for Ford and also sells Mazda cars, which are Toyo Kogo products. It is not immediately clear what would happen to Mazda arrangements.

Ford is the only big three U.S. auto-maker without an ownership stake in a Japanese partner, though Ford and Toyo Kogyo have discussed a closer affiliation off and on for several years.

Ford, Nissan and Toyo Kogyo own a subsidiary making transmissions and Toyo Kogyo is to supply transaxles for the 1981 replacements of the Ford Pinto and Mercury Bobcat.

General Motors Corp. owns 34 per cent of Isuzu Motors and Chrysler Corp. owns 15 per cent of Mitsubishi Motors Corp.

Toyo Kogyo is Japan's fourth largest auto-maker and ranks 104th on Fortune magazine's list of the largest companies outside the United States.

It was the seventh-largest importer of cars into the United States last year and the Courier line sold by Ford made it the fourth largest importer of trucks.

Toyo Kogyo had sales of $2.38 billion in 1977, the most recent year for which figures are available. The investment by its stockholders was about $364 million, which would put the cost of Ford's share at $72 million in 1977.

Quebec firm 'not locked in'

By ESTELLE DORAIS

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of Consolidated-Bathurst Inc. has made it clear the company will stay here as long as it can, but could easily move to Ontario or Alberta.

William I. M. Turner Jr., president and chief executive officer, said it is a mistake to assume that resource-based companies can't leave because resources and assets are here.

"Less than 49 per cent of our employees and less than 15 per cent of our sales are here," he said. "It's not as simplistic as some people think when they say: 'What can these guys do? They're imprisoned here.' "

He said he didn't know whether the Quebec government misunderstands the importance of head offices in Montreal or whether it understands and chooses to ignore it.

The language law forcing Canadians coming to the province to send their children to French-language schools and the income tax rates higher than elsewhere in Canada have created a time bomb.

As company executive vice-president Maurice Sauve put it: "A time will come when some companies will leave — and not by prior agreement.

"Look what happened in New York City," said Sauve, husband of federal Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve. "I guess you have to wait until people believe they are better off elsewhere."

"Some companies are not prepared to take it forever, so some will move," he added. "I'm not talking about our company at the moment."

And Turner said: "In this type of society, the lure of Ontario or the lure of Alberta is overwhelming because the gap (in tax rates) is widening."

But, while he believes Montreal is in for hard times as companies and people feel forced to move, he said he is willing to bet that things will be different in 10 years.

"I would be willing to put money on the table that in 10 years from now there will be a benefit to stay in Montreal, no matter what the government," he said.

In the meantime, Turner later told shareholders, the Quebec government "is drastically hurting this metropolis we love and rapidly turning Montreal into a loser — a victim, among other things, both of needless polarization and tax discrimination."

But the point is not to threaten the government in any way, Turner said. "We're not going to make statements such as: If the government doesn't do such and such, we'll do so and so."

Company heads have been warning of the possible consequences of the situation in public statements for a full year and "it's pretty certain that those messages at annual meetings are serious," he said.

U.S.TV, radio networks had modest profit gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerical television and radio networks in the United States showed healthy revenue increases last year, but smaller gains in profits, the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) said Monday.

The compilation is based on figures submitted by the ABC, CBS and NBC television networks and the 15 stations they own and operate; and from eight national radio networks — CBS, two Mutual Broadcasting Systems, NBC and ABC's three AM and one FM networks — and the 36 stations they own and operate.

Total net television broadcast revenues amounted to $3.5 billion in calendar 1978, up 15.1 per cent from 1977. Profits, before U.S. federal income tax, were $560 million, up only one per cent from 1977.

The three networks reported spending $265 million on their news and public affairs operations in 1978, an increase of 28 per cent from $207 million in 1977.

The radio networks and their owned and operated stations reported net broadcast revenues of $236.3 million, up 11.1 per cent from $212.7 million in 1977.

Pipelines to move oil sand wastes?

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government is contemplating moving waste material from Athabasca oil sands plants by pipeline, Norman Strom, a spokesman for the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board, said.

The scheme — which could cost hundreds of millions of dollars — involves moving tailings from oil sands plants to remote disposal sites.

The sites would be in basins and would take the form of huge mud piles eventually containing hundreds of millions of cubic metres of sludge, basically clay.

The proposals were outlined at a seminar attended by about 40 people who heard the results of a study commissioned by the board to locate storage sites.

The oil sands extraction process involves the creation of mountains of waste material — larger in volume than the amount mined in the first place.

This is because of the water and air added to the material in the course of extracting the bitumen, which is about 20 per cent of the volume of the oil sands.

The remaining 80 per cent is sand and clay. When put through the expansion plant it retains a certain amount of the water and the bulking "is roughly 40 to 50 per cent larger than the bulk contained by the material before it was mined," Strom said.

Syncrude and Great Canadian Oil Sands now pile excess waste in the vicinity of their plants on the oil sands.

But they are running out of area and because of the large volume of tailings involved, pipelines would be needed to move the waste to new disposal sites.

The preliminary study identified several potential areas in the region north of Fort McMurray, site of the Syncrude plant. The dump sites would be on each side of the Athabasca River, 10 to 20 kilometres from the river and five to 15 kilometres from likely future oil sands plants.

"The consultant looked at a dozen or more potential storage sites but several were ruled out because of potential environmental impact," said Strom.

Roll-on ships cutting cost

MONCTON (CP) — Florida oranges sell for about $1.80 a dozen at a retail store in St. John's, Nfld., while a pound of fresh cod goes for about $1.70 there.

Thousands of miles away, in Orlando, Fla., cod is sold at a similar store for $4 a pound and oranges for 80 cents a dozen.

The realities of the market-place and the basic law of supply and demand are traditional factors in the widely varied prices. But there's another consideration--cost of transportation.

However, transportation costs are being chipped away, spokesmen here say. And while bulk carriers, especially rail, can often undercut the highway transport system, commodities are increasingly finding their way into tractor-trailers.

In the Atlantic region, a Canadian firm is providing a major service to truckers as a link between markets in the United States and Canada.

CN Marine said it moved 230,000 trucks and tractor-trailers last year with an estimated $1 billion worth of goods destined for markets across the continent. This activity represented $6 million in the company's revenue, a full quarter of its revenue for 1978.

Ironically, CN Marine is not a trucking company — it operates a fleet of ferries — but its entry into the truck transport league was not accidental.

CN Marine officials said they purposely set out to provide an attactive service to their customers through the Atlantic region and that many in the trucking industry feel they have delivered.

Using roll-on, roll-off vessels such as the Marine Evangeline between Yarmouth, N.S. and Portland, Me., truckers no longer have to go through the ordeal of backing on and off ship, a procedure that often used to take up to two hours at both ends.

Two Victoria fisherman charged with fishing inside U.S coastal waters are innocent victims of a boundary dispute between the U.S. and Canada, says a United Fishermen and Allied Workers spokesman.

It has never been decided which country owns the area in which the two men were arrested by the U.S. Coast Guard, George Hewison, secretary of the UFAW union said Tuesday

"It looks like they're the innocent victims of the confusion about where the boundary line is between Canada and the U.S.," he said. "It's an issue that the two governments have got to settle because a fishing war between the two countries could erupt and nobody wants that."

U.S. Coast Guard officers Monday arrested Hoadley Marcus and Rick Rebitt, both of Victoria, and seized their vessel, the Pat T-2, near Cape Flattery in the Juan de Fuca Strait.

Scotti said the men face a maximum $25,000 fine, forfeiture of their boat and its catch.

Hewison said the strait averages only about 16 kilometres in width and that fishing borders are defined by an imaginary line running down the middle.

"There is no question in my mind the men weren't aware they were in disputed waters because they wouldn't want to risk their livelihoods by purposely trespassing," Hewison said. "The penalties are too high for that."

Scotti added that other Canadian vessels had been seized for violating the international agreement which prevents fishermen from catching sockeye salmon during their mating season.

Exhibits and action at Forces Day Saturday

Four hours of exhibits and action displays await visitors to CFB Esquimalt Saturday during Armed Forces Day.

HMC Dockyard gates will open at 12:30 noon for features which will include rides for children and adults, air-sea rescue, a flypast of jet fighter and surveillance aircraft, demolition divers, an air cadet glider display, the Canadian Forces mobile theatre, a band competition and open house aboard three destroyer escorts.

HMCS Gatineau will demonstrate its anti-submarine mortars and the auxiliary tugs Ville and Glen will be operating off the jetty.

Members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry will show weapon-firing, jeeps and armored personnel carriers.

The HMCS Malahat reservists, Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, and Defence Research Establishments will have displays, and the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) will present its pipes and drums.

The base fire boat Firebrand, will give firefighting demonstrations at 1, 2 and 3 p.m. and a 21-gun salute will signal day's end.

Troubled children conference

The eighth annual International Conference of the Canadian Schizophrenia Foundation will be held at the University of Victoria June 2-3.

Dr. Allan Cott, author of the book Orthomolecular Approach to Learning Disabilities, is one of the featured speakers.

Another featured speaker will be Dr. Benjamin Feingold, author of Why Your Child is Hyperactive. Feingold is well-known for his work with food additives-related behavior problems.

Dr. Abram Hoffer, president of the CSF will speak on orthomolecular nutrition. Hoffer pioneered the use of vitamins as treatment for schizophrenia in 1952.

During the annual banquet the guest speaker will be Dr. Arthur Robinson, research professor at the Linus Pauling Institute in California.

Other speakers include child behavior specialist Dr. Lendon Smith, pediatrist and allergy expert G.W. Gerrard and Dr. Bernard Rimland, founder and director of the Institute for Child Behavior Research in San Diego.

The conference is open to the public. A $50 registration fee includes the price of the banquet.

Tel barbed wire plan nipped

Barbed wire has no place in Victoria's residential areas, city council's public works committee ruled Tuesday.

The committee reached that decision in rejecting a request by B.C. Tel to string barbed wire around a vandal-plagued lot on North Park Street.

B.C. Tel engineer J.G. Steeves said in a letter to council the telephone company is experiencing weekend thefts on a regular basis at its compound on North Park Street.

"In particular, vehicle tampering, loss of tools, and stolen gasoline are becoming commonplace."

Steeves said barbed wire strung along the upper section of the fence would greatly improve security.

But Ald. Bill McElroy did not agree.

"If people are intent on breaking into that lot barbed wire is not going to stop them," he said.

"In a city like this, the city of gardens, there is no place for barbed wire. There must be some other way to deal with the problem."

McElroy added that if council allowed B.C. Tel to use barbed wire there would soon be similar requests from others.

"There are other people who wanted it. There are people who would like it around their back yards."

Ald. Bob Wright at first opposed McElroy's view, saying that "I've had trouble with vandalism myself and there's no other way to stop it . . . we don't have enough police."

But he later agreed to support McElroy's motion after the two aldermen agreed barbed wire could be used in industrial areas.

No deals, Clark vows

Clark said that he would begin immediately putting together an administration in order to be ready for the call of Governor-General Edward Schreyer to form the government.

Clark promised that "Quebec even if they didn't vote for us, voted massively for federalism ..."

"I remain confident that I can form a genuine national government." He promised there will be "effective, strong representatives in my cabinet from the province of Quebec. Quebec will not feel isolated in a Clark government."

A crowd of about 1,500 assembled at Clark's election headquarters in an arena in Spruce Grove on the outskirts of Edmonton.

In his victory speech Clark urged the other three leaders to work with his Conservative government to keep Canada united in the face of Premier Rene Levesque's promised referendum on Quebec independence.

"We share together a common dedication to this country," Clark said.

"I said often during the campaign that my promise was not to solve your problems for you. My promise was not to build your country for you ... (but) to build your country with you — to establish a sense of partnership between the people who sit in government and the Canadian people."

Clark earlier said he would not recall Parliament until September or October.

One of the first priorities would be to introduce a new budget containing his many election promises — allowing homeowners to deduct part of their mortgage interest payments from taxable income, reducing income taxes by an average of $300 a person, providing incentives for small businessmen and encouraging employees to buy shares in the companies for which they work.

"I think it was an 'anti' vote," he said after conceding to Conservative Don Cameron, a retired Kamloops businessman. "It was anti-government, anti-Trudeau, perhaps anti a number of other things.

Each of the 12 Conservatives who sat in the Commons when the vote was called won re-election. The party also had seven other winners and their total of 19 was up from 13 in 1974.

Among the winners were labor critic John Fraser in Vancouver South and defence critic Allan McKinnon of Victoria, both likely cabinet timber in a Clark government.

But although the Conservatives won the majority of seats in the election, it was the NDP which made the most dramatic gains. The NDP had fallen to its lowest level in B.C. since 1940 in the last election, with only two members.

Both the NDP winners last time, T. C. Douglas and Stuart Leggatt, had left the federal scene since the 1974 vote, and the NDP fielded a set of newcomers this time around.

Most of the NDP gains were made at the expense of the Liberals. New Democrats knocked off former Liberal MPs Campagnolo, Simma Holt in Vancouver Kingsway, Art Lee in Vancouver East, Hugh Anderson in Nanaimo-Alberni and Jack Pearsall in Comox-Powell River.

Pauline Jewett, a former Liberal MP and one-time president of Simon Fraser University who turned to NDP after the Trudeau government brought in the War Measures Act in 1970, was elated after her win in New Westminster-Coquitlam.

In addition to Marchand, the Conservatives upset Gordon Gibson, former provincial Liberal leader and an aide to the prime minister, in North Vancouver-Burnaby. They also took Cariboo-Chilcotin, a new area with a Liberal majority in 1974.

Campagnolo lost in a tough fight with New Democrat Jim Fulton, a provincial probation officer, in northwestern Skeena riding. She had trouble there combatting anti-Trudeau feeling, an alienated labor and native vote and dissatisfaction over inadequate transportation servicing the remote riding.

Campagnolo, said today she has "closed the book" on her political career. She was leaving politics with regret, she added.

"I'm not very happy with the policies of Joe Clark because I believe it will see 10 strong provinces at the expense of our Canada — our one strong nation that I have fought for ... but, I won't be involved with those things."

The defeat of Holt in a city where she has been a headliner for years — as a featured journalist before her 1974 election and as a vocal back-bencher following it — probably can be attributed to the national anti-Liberal voting trend.

Holt incurred widespread anger among the community in the spring of 1977 by her refusal to support a protest by Chinese merchants that federal health regulations made Chinese traditional barbecuing illegal.

PCs take 3, NDP 2, Grits wiped out

Tory Taylor wins tightest V.I. race; Another Skelly grabs one for NDP

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Vancouver Island residents gave the federal Liberal party the cold shoulder Tuesday night electing three Conservatives and two New Democrats in a dramatic switch of votes.

Liberal candidates in all five Island ridings, including the two incumbents, Hugh Anderson in Nanaimo-Alberni and Jack Pearsall in Comox-Powell River, went down to crashing defeat.

The most stunning upset was in the Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands riding which was won by PC candidate Donald Taylor, a Duncan teacher. The riding had been an NDP stronghold for more than 16 years, 11 under Tommy Douglas, a former leader of the party.

Douglas said this morning that although he was pleased the NDP had captured the two northern seats, he was disappointed Rev. Jim Manly of Ladysmith, making his first bid in a federal election, had not won in Cowichan-Malahat.

"It was not an easy time for a new candidate."

He said it became apparent early in the campaign that Taylor was the man to beat.

"He ran last time (the federal election in 1974) and did very well in the southern part of the riding," Douglas said.

While the polls reflected a close race, with Taylor getting 19,010 votes and Manly 17,450, the crunch came when the results started to pour in from the normally NDP-strong northern half of the riding. There Taylor managed to hold his own.

The NDP had counted on a spillover of the provincial election which saw eight of the 10 seats on the Island go to the NDP.

"I regret losing personally but more so I regret the loss of this area for the NDP," he said. "We have had very good representation by Tommy Douglas and Colin Cameron (who held the seat from 1963-68).

"The struggle goes on."

Manly felt he was the victim of a powerful Tory tide and a growing movement to restore capital punishment of which he is adamantly opposed.

"It's hard to assess the total picture right now," he said, adding he was caught in the middle of the collapse of the Liberal party in the province.

Said the winner Taylor:

Taylor, 49, was making the rounds at his school, Mount Prevost junior secondary in Duncan this morning.

"I promised the kids I'd come back and see them win or lose," he said. "I'm saying hello and goodbye."

Taylor felt the big loser in the election was the NDP.

"I don't believe the NDP is a national political party after this," he said. "They had an enormous amount of money and tremendous backing by labor but the party really didn't do that well."

He said one of the tragedies of the election was that Trudeau had managed to destroy the Liberal party in the West.

"It was a one-man rule and the people rejected him," he said.

One surprising outcome of the election in the riding was the poor showing of Liberal candidate David Anderson, former MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Anderson, who had been touted as a strong contender with wide appreciation for his work in conservation and environmental matters, received only 7,071 votes.

But there were no surprises in the two Greater Victoria ridings which PC incumbents Allan McKinnon and Don Munro took handily, each receiving more than 54 per cent of the votes.

In the newly-created ridings in the northern half of the Island, the NDP's Ray Skelly won by a 4,500 vote margin in Comox-Powell River and fellow New Democrat Ted Miller took Nanaimo-Alberni by a 4,800-vote margin.

Liberals Pearsall and Anderson were distant thirds capturing only 9,827 and 10,234 votes respectively.

All told there were 22 candidates seeking seats in the five ridings.

Marxist-Leninist candidates Allan Bezanson in Cowichin-Malahat, Dorothy Ratzlaff in Victoria, and Katie Fraser in Nanaimo-Alberni fared even worse. Bezanson got only 51 votes.

Waves whipped up a few years ago by racist sentiments in school books may have died down but Pranab Kumar Bhattacharjee's rage hasn't.

The B.C. Ferries engineer, who was born in India and came to Canada 11 years ago, is angry that although a fuss was created back then and an inquiry held, no report has ever been released and absolutely nothing has been done about it.

Back in 1976 when his daughter Nilanjana was in Grade 4, Bhattacharjee took an interest in the school books she brought home to read.

"I found out that the native Indian people were shown in a very poor light but I didn't know what to do about it," he explains.

The sort of thing he objected to was a story called The Matchlock Gun in Voyager 1, a reader for Grade 4 to 6 students, which is published in Canada.

"The author starts by saying that the Van Alstynes were real people, which at once creates the impression in the young mind that this is a true story," Bhattacharjee points out.

"The whole story is how the savage Indians who have been compared to animals are out to kill a helpless white mother and her two young children. In the author's own words:

"They hardly looked like men as they moved. They were trotting stooped over, first one and then another coming up, like dogs sifting up to the scent of food. Gertrude felt her heart pound."

Bhattacharjee says he really wonders if an Indian child reading such a story can be proud of its heritage.

A couple of weeks after being upset by this and other school books, he heard a radio program on the subject.

"It was on the CBC Morningside program and they said prejudice is inadvertently taught in schools," he explains.

And so Pranab Bhattacharjee went on his own anti-racist crusade, talking to the school principal and writing to the Human Rights Commission in Victoria and the Greater Victoria school board.

"School board chairman (at that time) Susan Brice was very sympathetic and the Human Rights Commission said it would institute an inquiry," he says.

While that study was being made though, Bhattacharjee's own investigations brought to light several more surprising things. He found that other groups as well as native Indians were discriminated against or portrayed in a bad light — including those from India, his homeland — that girls and women were shown as weaker people in the literature and that, although the provincial education ministry has an approved reading list, an individual school board can still buy books that aren't on that list.

"In particular there were four books I found disagreeable and all four of them were not on the approved list, yet they were in the school," he says.

"In Voyager 2, there's a story which explains that India is a Hindu-controlled country, which is wrong," Bhattacharjee says. "There's the largest Moslem population in the world in India and two presidents have been Moslems."

Of course, the upshot is, he explains, that his daughter goes to school and is called "Hindu! Hindu!"

That happened in 1976 and things haven't got any better. Just the other day, says an unhappy father, Nilanjana was at junior high when a boy threw a coin at her and said: "A penny for the Punjab!"

"This kind of thing happens every day — it's just ignorance which must be wiped out with proper teaching."

B.C. is sadly lagging in this matter. The kind of prejudice he talks about in the books our children read was investigated and action taken back in 1965 in Ontario and in other provinces. Yet not a word has been heard of the study completed in the fall of 1977 by the Human Rights Commission here.

Trouble is, the mandate of the old commission expired and there was an eight-month gap before a new one was named. When I phoned the commission a spokesperson told me that yes, the survey was completed but no, there is no report available yet. Reason is, apparently, it was too narrow, covering only history and social studies books. Now they want a wider survey done, covering everything that is read.

But that doesn't exactly make Pranab Bhattacharjee ecstatic. He plans to push on alone and will present a brief at a public hearing on education here on May 30.

"I held off doing any more about this because I felt the Human Rights Commission was going to do something about it," he explains. "But obviously they're not. They're not going to do a thing.

"And so, as parents, we must put pressure on . . ."

Ask the Times

Q. What is the circulation of all national newspapers in Britain? J.B.

A. National papers have a circulation of about 14 million on weekdays and 19 million on Sundays. The total readership is nearly three times greater. More daily newspapers are sold in Britain than most countries.

Well, That's Politics

Only the NDP with seven seats prevented a Liberal sweep.

But the mood began to change, and 10 years later, the Tories have picked up 19 or 20 B.C. seats (depending on the final outcome in Vancouver Centre) and it is the Liberal's turn to be wiped off the provincial electoral map.

The party could hold one seat. It trails the Vancouver Centre riding by two votes.

NDP fortunes continue to yo-yo. In 1968 the party won seven seats, in 1972 it jumped to 11, then fell to two in 1974. Now they're on the upswing again with eight.

For the McKinnons, the victory margin was greater this time — and sweeter

The McKinnon crunch

Tory bastion staunchly defended once more

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The winner of the battle along Fort Street was a foregone conclusion long before election day though at least one challenger thought she had a chance to take out Tory incumbemt Allan McKinnon.

But McKinnon, likely Canada's next defence minister, not only sloughed off his opposition but strengthened his position over his last two victories in Victoria — the riding once held by the personification of Conservativism, Sir John A. Macdonald, the nation's first prime minister.

At 8:47 p.m., as unruffled as ever, McKinnon quietly thanked his campaign workers after the radio and television stations had declared him winner.

Gretchen Brewin, the NDP hopeful who felt the party's sweep of the two Victoria provincial seats would help her topple McKinnon, trailed a distant second, although doubling the number of ballots the party received in 1974.

Rookie Bob Monaghan, a lawyer, was another victim of the Trudeauphobia that swept the country. His Liberals slipped to third place in the riding they held as recently as 1972.

Incumbent McKinnon tallied 27,998 to Brewin's 15,344 and Monaghan's 7,763. Marxist-Leninist candidate Dorothy Ratzlaff picked up 89 votes.

McKinnon said his party will have no trouble dealing with the NDP in a minority government although past minorities have seen the NDP side with the Liberals.

McKinnon said the Tories will put forward its policies without coercion from the NDP.

If the NDP oppose increased defence spending, then the support will come from the Liberals, he predicted.

If McKinnon is named defence minister as many predict, he will be headed for a portfolio leader Joe Clark has promised will be greatly expanded.

Clark has pledged to strengthen Canada's role in NATO. And the country is in the midst of replenishing its fighter plane stock with a $2.3 billion investment. The decison of what kind of fighter to buy would fall on McKinnon's shoulders.

Before the early returns set the trend that would see McKinnon retain his seat, the mood in the NDP headquarters on lower Fort was tense but optimistic.

Amid the cheers and knowledge that the party could win its largest number of seats ever if all went well in B.C., supporters wondered if they dare hope for the unbelievable.

By 9 p.m., Brewin was further up Fort Street in the Tory headquarters offering congratulations to McKinnon.

She was joined by Monaghan. The two spoke briefly saying they might see each other on the hustings again sometime in the future.

In the subdued Liberal headquarters, cheers filtering in from McKinnon's supporters just down the street made the loss just that much harder to bear.

One of Monaghan's workers told him it was time to go, he had a duty to perform.

"So soon," the candidate quipped. It was not yet 9 p.m.

Fine spirit flowed in the old winery

By PAUL MOSS

With a whopping tally of 29,800 votes, the former diplomat almost doubled the 15,787-vote total of the NDP runner-up, schoolteacher Bob Cameron.

Trailing an almost-out-of-sight third was the Liberal candidate, lawyer Alan Peterson, with 8,112 votes. Pro-life candidate Philip Ney collected 872 votes.

In a high voter turnout of 78 per cent, the result was never in doubt from the time the first polls were counted.

A mood of boisterous high spirits prevailed at Munro's campaign headquarters — the old Ste. Michelle winery building on Quadra — throughout the evening as Tory successes were pinned to a massive results board by students of St. Margaret's School.

Within minutes of Munro's victory speech at 9:35 p.m., Cameron arrived to offer congratulations to his opponent, followed almost immediately by Peterson.

Munro, who was first elected MP in 1972 and has been the opposition's environment critic, modestly sidestepped suggestions that he might be in the running for a cabinet post in the new Conservative government.

"That would be up to Joe," he said.

He attributed his success to his solid constituency service, coupled with anti-Trudeau sentiment.

Although Trudeau had run on a unity platform, he said, "he is anything but a unifier — he is a disintegrator."

Cameron, who complimented his opponents on avoiding mud-slinging campaign tactics, expressed surprise that the NDP didn't fare better in Saanich where he was recently an alderman.

Peterson was philosophical about his own defeat and the ousting of the Liberals.

"We didn't expect to make it this time, given the mood of the country and the feeling of change in the air," he said.

"But we're looking at it from a two-election point of view. We have a good organization and it looks like we'll be back in 18 months."

SO YOU'D RATHER FIGHT

For only the strong and brave

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

If the Romans accepted throwing Christians to the lions as a sport, then it is possible street fighting, or a form thereof, may be clothed with respectability in the 20th century.

The new fad brings the strong and brave into into the boxing ring, with no great emphasis on boxing skills, to flail away for prize money.

The new "sport" came to Victoria Tuesday and proved to be sadistically popular with 1,972 customers that helped make "So You'd Rather Fight" challenge a financial success.

It proved to be a success, too, for a 35-year-old fireman, the new pride of the Bounty Hunters' motorcycle club and a gutsy 23-year-old graduate of Victoria's junior football Dolphins.

Tommy Black, the fireman and former lacrosse and boxing star; Dan Purgai, the biker, and Al Pedersen, the stocky, 230-pound footballer, were the big winners from Victoria's introduction to the fistic elimination game.

Each had to subdue three opponents to win $1,000.

Black, as expected, did with with finesse although he hasn't fought in a ring in 14 years. Entered by fellow firemen because he said he would rather enter the tournament than pay $15 for a ringside seat, he scored a split decision over Rob Ronald, decisioned a game 17-year-old Robin Atkinson and then knocked out Mark McGann, a provincial government employee, in the first round of the lightweight (under 175) final.

Neither Purgai nor Pedersen showed the same boxing skills but they obviously knew what fighting is about. Willing and able to take punches, both Purgai and Pedersen also could throw them.

Purgai, 6-foot-3, conceded 6-foot-6 Gary Hamilton considerable reaching advantange but stopped his lanky rival in the second; kayoed nightclub bouncer Tim Southwood in the second and then took the middleweight (176-200) division by also stopping Dave Way early in the first round.

Pedersen clubbed his way to the heavyweight (200 and over) championship despite suffering a broken nose in his first bout and facing rivals that were technically superior and faster. Jack Dembrowski of Vancouver, a baseball pitcher, broke Pederson's nose before being tko'd in the first round. Pedersen then scored a highly unpopular and controversial knockout over Frank Babcock and then came back to decision rugby star Hans DeGoede in the final.

Babcock, at 195 and 35 pounds lighter than Pedersen, jumped out of the middleweight class as a last-minute substitution for Darryl Henderson, who suffered a broken hand in training.

* * *

He seemed to have an edge over Pedersen until stung with a looping right in the second period. Referee Jack O'Hanley reached the count of eight and Babcock got back on his feet while Pedersen waited in a neutral corner. Babcock, with his back to the ring centre, hung his head and Pedersen rushed across and unloaded aother punch that dropped Babcock again, for good.

The crowd was enraged.

Pedersen, who came around later to apologize to Babcock, said he was confused by the referee's action. He felt Babcock was out on his feet and that Hanley should have stopped the fight.

Eight fighters started in each of the three divisions and there was never any shortage of action in the 21 bouts.

The crowd produced an estimated gross gate of about $22,000 for co-promoters Keith Wilson and the owners of the Victoria Mussels baseball team — brothers Jim and Lynn Chapman.

Complete results:

Thousands honor Stanley Cup winners

MONTREAL (CP) — Thousands of fans poured into the streets today to line the eight-kilometre parade route from the Forum to City Hall as Montreal Canadiens displayed the Stanley Cup to their city for the fourth consecutive year.

The Canadiens captured their 22nd Cup title Monday night with a 4-1 victory over New York Rangers in the fifth game of the best-of-seven National Hockey League final.

One brother wins at other's expense

By Canadian Press

That's some brother act, Phil and Joe Niekro.

Only three other sets of brothers have won more games combined in the history of major league baseball. And Joe sweetened his career figures Tuesday night with his 100th victory.

"He's got a lot of good years left," Phil said after watching his younger brother pitch Houston Astros to a 4-1 victory over his Atlanta Braves. "He's got the confidence a knuckleball pitcher needs, plus he's got other pitches better than I do, like his fastball and slider."

The pride of brotherhood overshadowed the pain of defeat and Phil Niekro bowed to the victor by sending him a bottle of liquor with a note that said "Congratulations."

"It's just probably cheap wine," joked Joe.

Then he got serious.

"I consider myself a good knuckleball pitcher," he said, "But Phil is a great one. No one in baseball has a better knuckler than Phil."

Joe's career victory total is roughly half that of his more illustrious brother — 100 to 202. But he's 33, while Phil is 40.

Incidentally, the brother combinations ahead of the Niekros in victories are, Gaylord and Jim Perry with 485; Johnny, Art and Walt Clarkson with 380 and Christy and Henry Mathewson with 373 — all of them by Christy.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies took a 3-1 decision from St. Louis Cardinals, New York Mets stopped Chicago Cubs 4-2, Montreal Expos turned back Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3, San Francisco Giants routed Cincinnati Reds 12-2 and San Diego Padres stopped Los Angeles Dodgers 7-6 in 10 innings.

Meanwhile in the American League, Fred Lynn belted a three-run homer, but just as much post-game attention focused upon the 75-foot fluke single by Gary Allenson which keyed a seven-run Boston second inning.

"I can't believe I'm getting all this attention," said Allenson, a rookie who could play until the turn of the century and not duplicate the hit which keyed Boston's 7-5 victory over Baltimore.

Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger made a futile attempt to reach the ball after pitcher Mike Flanagan stepped aside, and it fell for an run-scoring single to give Boston a 2-0 lead.

Jerry Remy and Rick Burleson followed with singles for two more runs and then Lynn crashed a 400-foot drive over the centre-field fence.

Elsewhere, New York Yankees whipped Detroit Tigers and Mark (The Bird) Fidrych 12-8, Cleveland Indians downed to Blue Jays 8-6 on Andre Thornton's grand-slam homer, Chicago White Sox defeated Oakland A's 5-4, Milwaukee Brewers routed California Angels 7-1, Texas Rangers edged Minnesota Twins 4-3 and Seattle Mariners outlasted Kansas City Royals, 12-11.

Full-time president prime need of CAHA

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will soon have its first full-time president.

The CAHA decided unanimously at its annual meeting Tuesday that the position of president is no longer a part-time position to be handled on a voluntary basis.

The restructuring of the CAHA now leaves the president responsible to the board of directors with a chairman in charge. The duties of the executive director remain unchanged.

Gord Renwick of Cambridge, Ont., who is serving his final term as president, said a country-wide search for the new president would begin immediately. Renwick said neither he nor vice-president Frank McKinnon would apply for the new position. McKinnon would have been Renwick's successor under the old format.

"The job of being a volunteer president is almost impossible with the amount of time involved," Renwick said, adding he spent 109 days away from home in the last year of his term. "A full-time president would have the continuity with sponsors, continuity with government and continuity with the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF)."

Owner suit threatens to stop Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The reality of racing is little more than an afterthought at Indianapolis Motor Speedway today with the possibility looming of either a 44-car field or no race at all when the starting time arrives for Sunday's Indy 500.

Matters came to a boil Tuesday when car owner Wayne Woodward filed suit to halt the $1 million race and the United States Auto Club decided to offer 11 other entrants an opportunity to qualify their cars in a special session Thursday.

Woodward's suit, filed in Marion County Superior Court and scheduled for a hearing Thursday, asks the race be stopped unless his car is reinstated. Woodward's racer was removed from the lineup after qualifying amid allegations of cheating on power restrictions imposed by USAC.

Woodward's car, driven by Dick Ferguson, was not among the 11 offered an unprecedented chance to win places in the field. All of those cars were bumped from the grid during time trials by faster cars.

Any of the cars in the special session qualifying faster than the slowest car now in the field — placed there by Roger McCluskey at 183.908 miles an hour — would be relegated to the back of the traditional 33-car lineup.

The offer was made by USAC president Dick King under a USAC competition rule allowing special rulings "for the well-being of automotive competition."

The only stipulation was that all 33 entrants already in the race agree in writing to the extra qualifying round.

Lindsey Hopkins, owner of the car that Johnny Parsons was qualified in the third row, wouldn't speak for his fellow owners, but said: "I'll agree to it. I think it's a temperate, wise decision."

King said the action was taken because the 11 cars involved qualified before a USAC bulletin was issued prior to the final day of time trials "suggesting" that exhaust pipes have a minimum inside diameter of 1.47 inches. The bumped drivers said that amounted to legalizing attempts to over-ride power restrictions and put them at a competitive disadvantage.

The special qualifying session, which would begin at 10 a.m. Thursday, would be open to the cars originally qualified by Steve Krisiloff, Spike Gehlhausen, John Martin, Bill Vukovich, Dana Carter, Jerry Karl, Al Loquasto, Tom Bigelow, Joe Saldana, John Mahler and Larry Cannon, Krisiloff, Gehlhausen, Bigelow, Saldana and Mahler qualified in other cars after they were bumped, thereby opening the possibility of other drivers qualifying those cars.

King took issue with the rumor that cheating on power restrictions had been widespread on both the first and second weekends of qualifications. He said those reports were "based largely on rumors and hearsay."

Woodward said he filed the suit out of desperation.

"I don't want this race halted on my behalf in any way, shape or form unless that's what it takes to put my car back in the race," he said.

Portland group buys Breakers

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Seattle Breakers of the Western Hockey League have been sold to a group of five investors from Portland, Ore.

Bill Moore, the Breakers' new president and general manager, said the group purchased the junior club from Ephraim Steinke of Kamloops. Steinke moved the franchise here two years ago after several years in Kamloops.

Moore said the club will have a budget of $300,000 for next season and will benefit from upgraded facilities at the Seattle Centre Coliseum.

Legion overtime winner

Esquimalt Legion evened its Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League record at 3-3 Tuesday night by tripping Coquitlam Adanacs 11-9 in overtime at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Michael's insurance marker was his second goal of the game. Terry Jay and Wayne Reed also had two goals for Esquimalt and singles were contributed by Steve Breer, Jim Boyd, Tarey Pollock and Ed Van Dyk. Mike Reelie paced the Adanacs with two goals and five assists.

Goal problem hits the Irish

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

"You can't win if you can't do that, and when you can't hit the goal that doesn't help either," said coach Bill Munroe.

The Shamrocks, who are off to a rocky start, host Western Lacrosse Association-leading New Westminster Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena tonight.

On Saturday the Irish were surprise 8-6 losers to Nanaimo Timbermen at Nanaimo.

"We had 37 wild shots," said Munroe. "We had the odd-man and were all over them in the last four minutes and still couldn't score," he added.

"But it will come," he said. "It's early yet."

Otherwise, there soon may be some changes.

The Kevin Alexander case hopefully may be resolved. At least a meeting was scheduled for tonight between Shamrock and Timbermen officials regarding Alexander, who played with the Timbermen last year and wants to play with the Shamrocks this season.

The impasse in negotiations has existed since the start of the season and may have been broken by Ron MacNeil of the Shamrocks having joined the Timbermen. This was understood to be part of any deal for Alexander coming to the Rocks.

"Kevie would certainly help us, especially on the power play," said Munroe, who coached him when he was with McDonalds juniors.

Dhillon, 34, who works a midnight shift at a mill, is finding the double duty increasingly difficult as he has to go straight to work following games.

Another doubtful starter is Norm Baker who has a giant bruise from his knee to his groin.

Munroe says he he may fill the vacant spots in the lineup with a couple of juniors from Esquimalt Legion.

On the plus side, veteran Ranjit Dillon, who has been sidelined by illness since the second game of the season, is expected to return.

TENNIS ENTRY DEADLINE SATURDAY

All kinds of racquets

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Racquets galore!

That's what we've got. More and more of them as special bonus prizes in this summer's Sixth Annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament.

Last Friday I told you that, in addition to the usual trophies that go each time to the winners and runners-up in all five events, there will be for the first time this year new tennis racquets (courtesy of Centre Court Racquets) for the men's and women's singles champions.

Now Ken Holman, who owns the store specializing in tennis wear and equipment in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora Avenue, has boosted the prize stakes. Now, the winners of all five events (providing there are enough entries for five) will take home new racquets.

Both partners in the winning mixed doubles combination will receive the Sweet Shot, a metal racquet valued at around $60 and manufactured by newcomer to the tennis game, Black Knight.

Boys' and girls' event champions will get a Black Knight wooden racquet and, as we told you Friday, the men's and women's singles winners will take home a new Dunlop each.

All racquets handed out as prizes will be strung and ready for action but, if you've just bought yourself a new racquet, never fear. Ken says you can trade your prize for something of equal value in his store.

Though he at first looked at the men's and women's contests as the "glamor events", Ken's reasoning behind the much more generous offer is that the young players would probably benefit more at this stage of their game from a new racquet.

The tourney — designed not for club players but for those who like to bat the ball around on public parks courts — gets under way the first weekend in June and winds up on the weekend of Aug.18 and 19.

But be quick! Time is running out. Entry deadline is 5 p.m. this Saturday.

A Lifetime of Adventure Contained In New Book

Armchair dreamers will love it.

So will people possessed by an inexplicable drive to explore the frontiers of their own knowledge and skills in far-flung exotic endeavors.

The book, published by Random House of Canada Limited and compiled by the American Adventure Association, costs $12.50. Quite a bit for a paperback. But in terms of the information it contains, the price may be right.

As the authors quite rightly point out:

"Sometimes it may seem that all the great discoveries have been made. The age of exploration has come and gone, the Everests and Matterhorns have been climbed, the Amazon has been investigated from its source to its delta. But have you made these discoveries for yourself? Have you sailed those seas, climbed those mountains or explored those rivers? Each discovery waits to be made anew on adventure trips all over the world. Whether you climb, sail, dive, ski or soar, each adventure brings home to you the true meaning of discovery — a gaining of new insight into yourself, as well as the world around you. You cannot read about it, watch it on television or hear it from a friend. You have to do it yourself."

Each of the sections covers a number of general outdoor pursuits located all over the world. Mountaineering, skiing, snowshoeing, dogsledding, trekking, wildlife safaris, horsebacking, cattle driving, backpacking, caving, bicycle touring and wilderness survival are among the land-based activies covered in the book. Air adventures include ballooning, soaring, flying, hang gliding and parasailing/parachuting. The potential adventurer can select from river rafting, canoeing, kayaking, sailing, windjamming, cruising, houseboating and research expeditions among the listing of water adventures.

There's a trip for just about every budget, from a $3 ski tour in Wisconsin to an $8,000 around-the-world cruise.

Each of the trips listed contains such basic information on cost, time of year the tour is offered and an address and telephone number to contact for further information.

But anyone buying the book should be prepared for a little frustration.

Cricket opener halted by rain

LONDON (AP-CP) - Canada was 185 for 9 innings closed and Maylasia 13 for 1 when rain stopped their match Tuesday in the opening qualifying competition at the World Cup cricket championships.

The United States and Denmark were early winners as the lesser cricket countries began a bid to join the giants in the World Cup finals.

The Americans, led by West Indian Neil Lashkari, who hit 44 runs, defeated Israel by 41 runs, 126-85.

Eight teams are competing for two vacant places in the World Cup beginning next month. The two finalists in the preliminary tournament will join the six powers of the world game — England, Australia, New Zealand, West Indies, India and Pakistan.

The United States, by defeating Israel, took a step toward saving the organizers from possible political complications. Sri Lanka and Pakistan have said they will refuse to play against Israel.

Bowman's enjoyment tempered by doubts

MONTREAL (CP) — Scotty Bowman wanted to enjoy his latest moment as Stanley Cup-winning coach with Montreal Canadiens, but his National Hockey League future looked somewhat in doubt Monday.

Bowman, who has guided the Canadiens to five Cup titles, including the last four in a row, said he would be considering what to do in coming weeks and months.

"I want to savor this victory fully, but after that I'm going to give serious consideration to my future," said Bowman, 45.

Bowman, named coach of the club June 10, 1971, remains under contract to the Canadiens but has received permission to talk to any team he wishes. He has been reported to want the general manager's job, but Irving Grundman currently holds the equivalent title of managing director.

"The Canadiens have a great organization and the jobs are well defined. That's always been the key to the team's success. I have roots here in Montreal, obviously, but I've moved a lot in my life. I don't want to decide too soon.

"Two weeks from now, I'll start to talk to certain teams.

Bold Agent picked as 3-1 plate choice

TORONTO (CP) — Bold Agent, owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, has been picked as the 3-1 favorite in revised odds by the Ontario Jockey Club's oddsmakers to win the 1¼-mile Queen's Plate at Woodbine race track June 30.

Eighty-five colts, geldings and fillies remain eligible for the $100,000-added event — North America's oldest continuously run stakes race — after the Plate payment May 1. An entry fee of $2,000 is required two days before the race for three-year-olds bred in Canada.

Joe Holmes and Don Stansfield, the oddsmakers, are predicting a second straight Plate victory for Taylor, owner of Windfields Farm, who won it last year with Regal Embrace.

Prior to last year, Taylor, the world's leading breeder of stakes winners, hadn't won the Plate since 1964 when Northern Dancer finished first.

Bold Agent was the Queen's Plate winterbook second choice in January when the oddsmakers released their selections for 161 horses who remained eligible after the Dec. 30 payment.

Last year's Plate carried a record purse of $164,755 with $107,090 going to the winner. This year's purse stands at $145,910 and it's expected the gross purse will be more than $170,000.

Ashford named to B.C. boxla post

The British Columbia Lacrosse Association has its first development coordinator.

Former National Hockey League official Malcolm Ashford has been appointed to the post by BCLA president Ed Linstead.

"We are extremely pleased to have a man of Malcolm's expertise join us," said Linstead in making the announcement.

In an attempt to upgrade the profile of lacrosse throughout the province, Ashford will assist with the coaches and referees development programs, initiate fund-raising projects and encourage corporate participation at all levels of the sport.

Ashford will also be responsible for formulating the marketing strategy for the BCLA's many events and will act as provincial lacrosse tournament director.

Argentina does it again

BERNE, Switzerland (Reuter) — Argentina, 3-1 winners over the Netherlands in the World Cup soccer final last year, beat the Dutch again Tuesday night but only after a 20-minute penalty competition.

The rerun of the World Cup final, to celebrate the International Football Federation's (FIFA) 75th anniversary, produced soccer that fluctuated from the first-half brilliance to a second half of drudgery.

FIFA's insistence on a result brought about the penalty competition which Argentina won 8-7.

Cruyff signs with Aztecs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Johan Cruyff of the Netherlands, regarded as one of the most skillful players ever to compete in soccer, signed a multi-year contract Tuesday with Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League.

Financial terms of the pact were not divulged but it had been reported that the rival American Soccer League had pooled resources and made a $1.5 million offer to the 32-year-old player.

Cruyff joins the Aztecs after playing nine years, 1965-73, with Ajax of Amsterdam and the last five seasons with Barcelona, Spain.

A native of Amsterdam, Cruyff stands five-foot-nine and weighs 150 pounds. In his 14-year career, the high-scoring midfielder led his teams to six league championships, three European championships, one club team World Cup, and in 1974 he directed the Dutch national team to the finals of the World Cup.

Cruyff was selected European soccer player of the year three times, the most valuable player in the World Cup of 1974 and five times the Dutch player of the year.

He announced his retirement from soccer last November after leading Barcelona to the national championship of Spain. Undoubtedly, his former coach Rinus Michels, who directs the Aztecs, had a strong influence in the player's decision to come to the United States and join Los Angeles.

Canada draws Australia

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Canada, current North American badminton champions, meets Australian zone winners Japan in the opening match of the Thomas Cup finals Thursday.

The winners of that match will face defending champion Indonesia on May 28. The Canadian team is already here acclimatizing itself, but Japanese team manager Takafusa Itagaki was confident of victory for his side, which includes Kinji Zeniya and Masao Tsuchida.

Japan failed to qualify for the last finals, held in 1976, when beaten by Malaysia.

Dinnies Lose Coach

CALGARY (CP) — Marilyn McNeil, Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union women's basketball coach of the year last season, is heading for California. McNeil has resigned as University of Calgary coach to accept a similar position at California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo.

Malone most valuable in NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Moses Malone of Houston Rockets, the National Basketball Association's leading rebounder, was named Tuesday the league's most valuable player for the 1978-79 season.

Malone received 112 votes in balloting by 223 NBA players completed at the end of the regular season, the NBA announced.

George Gervin of San Antonio Spurs, the league scoring champion for the second straight season, finished second with 35 votes, followed by Elvin Hayes of Washington Bullets, 28, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles Lakers, 15.

The 24-year-old Malone, who passed up college to sign with the pros directly out of high school, averaged 17.6 rebounds a game to 12.8 for runner-up Rich Kelley of New Orleans Jazz. His 587 offensive rebounds broke his own NBA record and he grabbed 10 rebounds or more in 78 of the 82 regular-season games.

Malone, 6-feet-10 and 215-pounds, also ranked fifth in the league in scoring with a 24.8 average.

This was his fifth professional season. Had he played four years of college ball, he would have been a rookie in the NBA this year.

"He has only scratched the surface of his potential," said Houston coach Tom Nissalke. "He's only about three-quarters of what he can be."

Malone is the 15th straight centre to be named MVP, the last non-centre to win having been guard Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati in 1964. The award was won by Bill Walton of Portland Trail Blazers last year and by Abdul-Jabbar the two previous seasons.

ISLAND HOOP TEAM EDGED IN FINALS

BURNABY (CP) — Vancouver teams won the men's and women's divisions of the first provincial-regional basketball tournament sponsored by the British Columbia Amateur Basketball Association.

Vancouver edged Vancouver Island 84-82 Monday in the men's final as Kevin Dancs sank the winning basket with 23 second left to play.

In women's play, Vancouver stopped Fraser Valley 65-56.

Triple play no help

Juan de Fuca Builders came up with a rare triple play — all for naught — while losing a 5-0 decision to Elks-Athletics in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League play Tuesday at Central Park.

Ray Beveridge picked up the pitching win for Elks-Athletics by scattering seven hits and helped his own cause by knocking in two runs. Bob Wilson also drove in two runs.

Juan de Fuca shortstop Mike Penner was the key star in the triple play, getting credit for two outs and an assist. Lou Vermette opened the inning for Elks-Athletics with a single and Bob Bugslag followed suit. Bob Gray then bounced sharply to pitcher Bob Fletcher, who fired to Penner. Penner tagged both Vermette and Bugslag and tossed to first to retire Gray.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play, Debbie Derkson pitched a five-hitter to lead Stockers North Americans to a 5-0 shutout over VI 90 and Sue Beisher smacked a two-run double in the fifth inning for the winning run as Dryco Breakers nipped Bemister's Welding 3-2 at Hyacinth Park.

Claremont, Mt. Doug lead qualifying meet

Victoria and district champion Claremont and Mt. Douglas, runner-up to Claremont in the last three district meets, are tied with three qualifiers each for the British Columbia high school track and field meet after opening action Tuesday at Centennial Stadium.

Eight of the 25 events are completed and the Island meet was scheduled to wrap up this afternoon. Team standings will be kept but the emphasis will be on qualifiers to the provincial championships.

St. Michael's University School, Dunsmuir, Lake Cowichan and Nanaimo have two qualifiers each while Shawnigan Lake and Victoria High each have one.

$6-a-bushel wheat year predicted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Foul weather has sweetened the outlook for possible record-high export prices for Canadian wheat that could exceed the $6-a-bushel level early next year.

Two market analysts Tuesday agreed an expected world-wide drop in crop production this year, caused by adverse growing conditions in some countries, could mean record prices by early 1980.

"I'm pretty sure we're going to develop some tightness in supply," Lynn Malmberg of the Alberta department of agriculture said in an interview Tuesday.

Malmberg said such a situation could result in price peaks in the $6- to $6.50-a-bushel range "probably in the first quarter of 1980."

But Peter Perkins of United Grain Growers, while also predicting prices in the $6-a-bushel range, said the level "is nowhere near as impressive as $6 was in 1974 because the dollar has shifted so much in value."

World demand rocketed wheat prices to a high of $6.07 a bushel in December, 1974 although the average for the 1974-75 crop year was $5.26 a bushel. The Canadian wheat board's asking price basis Thunder Bay Tuesday was $4.75 a bushel.

Malmberg said that on a global basis, wheat production could be down 20 to 30 million tonnes this year with the most notable reduction coming in the Soviet Union.

"They (Soviet Union) had some planting problems last fall with the winter wheat crop, and winter kill was rough," he said.

"This year they're behind in their seeding of spring grain and while they might get the crop seeded it's probably going to be late."

On the other hand, he said, the United States and Canada could produce slightly bigger crops than last year with good growing conditions.

Perkins said that while world stocks still are quite huge, a lower crop this year will reduce it "and that is the sort of circumstance where you get a more buoyant price for wheat."

Insurance claims light after twister

REGINA (CP) — One farm was extensively damaged and shingles were torn loose in a residential area of Regina Monday night when tornadoes twisted to earth.

There were no reports of injuries.

With the exception of the farm north of the city, a spokesman for Saskatchewan government insurance said damage was light. Clary Mitchell said there were about 15 minor claims from the Glencairn Village area of Regina.

Trucks gun past pickets

MONTREAL (CP) — Trucks owned by an independent company are maintaining the supply of fuel and cement to construction sites at the James Bay hydroelectric project, despite picket lines thrown up by support workers across the entrance of the project's only access road in Matagami, Que.

The 625 support workers, who were flown out of the isolated sites last Friday by their employer, the James Bay Energy Corp., after they refused to end immediately a 24-hour strike, have been unable to block the road, said Gerard Cote, secretary of the United Steelworkers local.

He said only 60 support workers have been able to make their way to Matagami, the community at the base of the 600-kilometre access road, after the corporation evacuated them to Montreal and Quebec City.

Drivers for Provost Trucking were "gunning their trucks" through the thin picket lines at rail yards in the town, about 700 kilometres north of Montreal, Cote said.

Cote was arrested Monday by police, who said he tried to prevent a truck from entering the corporation property. He was released on his own recognizance.

The corporation and the union are expected to meet later this week with Paul-Emile Talon, a provincially-appointed conciliator.

Hospitals still hit

QUEBEC (CP) — Nurses in many Quebec hospitals and clinics staged rotating strikes Tuesday for the fourth straight day, leaving skeleton crews and supervisory nurses to cope with essential services as best they could.

The 12,000-member Federation des Syndicats Professionnels d'Infirmieres et d'Infirmiers du Quebec has rejected a tentative contract negotiated by a coalition of unions representing 23,500 nurses and medical technicans.

OTTAWA (CP) - The rising suicide rate among teenagers can best be countered with a little caring by those around troubled youths, says author Brenda Rabkin.

Mrs. Rabkin, whose book Growing Up Dead follows several years of research on the phenomenon of teenage suicides, told members of the College of Family Physicians Tuesday that suicide is the second most common cause of death among young persons in Canada.

"A conservative estimate is that suicide in Canada among young people aged 15 to 19 has tripled in the last 10 years."

Earlier, Dr. Peter Grantham of Vancouver told the physicians that in the last seven years, the suicide rate in Ontario among those between 10 and 24 years old has increased by 32 per cent.

Mrs. Rabkin, a Winnipeg journalist and mother, said most youngsters who try to take their own lives give off strong warning signals long before they attempt suicide.

"The clues are there. They should not be shrugged off as a stage that will soon pass."

Parents, teachers, doctors and ministers should be aware of messages indicating a youth needs help and attention.

She says 70 per cent of adolescent suicide attempts take place in the home while parents are there.

While most large urban areas had drop-in clinic and crisis lines for those needing immediate help, the person in distress must make the first move to seek support.

"There are times, however, when he (or she) is unable to do so, particularly if he is young, very depressed and unaware of resources in his community."

The increasing number of suicides partly reflects a growing acceptance of taking one's own life, Mrs. Rabkin added.

"Generally, there is a permissive attitude towards suicide, particularly among young people."

For example, she said, famed rock star Elton John has even written a song entitled I Think I'm Going to Kill Myself.

Fished-out Spaniard faces charge

MONTREAL (CP) — A Spanish sailor who was rescued, naked, from the St. Lawrence River by two fishermen last Friday was arraigned in sessions court in nearby Valleyfield Tuesday on a charge of remaining in Canada illegally.

Twenty-eight-year-old Manuel Vasquez Salgano of Lascoma, Spain, a crew member of a Liberian tanker, pleaded not guilty to the charge, and faces a court hearing May 28.

Escaping prisoner shot dead

EDMONTON (CP) — One of three prisoners who tried to escape Tuesday night from the maximum security Edmonton Institution was shot dead by a prison guard.

A prison official said the three men were seen by a guard in a gun tower as they tried to run across an open field.

The name of the dead prisoner was not released pending notification of next of kin.

"After verbal warnings and warning shots were fired, one of the escapees was fatally wounded," said Dennis Heward, an assistant institute director, in a prepared statement.

"The other two were recaptured immediately before reaching the boundaries of the penitentiary reserve."

The prison's inside fence is supposed to be touch-sensitive and cameras are intended to monitor the fences from the guard towers. But the $1.2-million alarm system is not working because of installation problems.

Dennis Weir, also an assistant institute director, said last week the security system should be working by the end of May or early June.

Grounding defended

OTTAWA (CP) — Peter Arpin, Transport Canada's civil aviation director, says grounding eight Beechcraft 90 aircraft used to check airport navigation systems is not serious.

Arpin said in a press release Tuesday the navigation systems are protected by a 30- to 60-day safety period, but those which required immediate testing would be checked.

LaMarr Stanford, national manager of the aircraft operations group representing the department's 360 inspectors, Sunday said suspending the inspections could have catastrophic results.

The grounded aircraft check high-frequency radio signals from navigation systems along airport approach flight paths that guide pilots when visibility is poor. Stanford said a faulty radio signal could cause a pilot to miss the runway.

Transport Canada grounded the Beechcraft to await results of an investigation into the crash of a Beechcraft 90 King Air plane near Montreal in which two inspectors were killed.

Stanford also charged Sunday that transport officials were attempting to cover up a serious maintenance problem that led to the May 1 crash.

In a interview Monday, Arpin said metallurgical tests showed a wing was wrenched off during flight because of metal fatigue. But the department had not yet established if a maintenance check missed the over-stressed wing.

Stanford said one metallurgist told him the crack had been there for some time.

Arpin said the plane was checked after logging 5,000 flying hours and had been due for one of a series of checks carried out every 500 flying hours after the intial 5,000-hour check.

Stanford, was removed as observer at a transport department investigation after he made his allegations.

Court acquits victim's widow

TORONTO (CP) — Lauralee Lorenz, accused of first-degree murder and of being an accessory after the fact in the shooting death of her husband, was cleared of all charges Tuesday in a three-minute hearing in Ontario Supreme Court.

Crown Attorney Michael Lynch told Mr. Justice Allan Goodman that he had agreed to drop all charges.

Mrs. Lorenz and Gordon Allen, an insurance agent from Orillia, Ont., were later charged with first-degree murder. Mrs. Lorenz, who had lived with Allen while she was separated from her husband, later agreed to testify for the Crown in its case against Allen and to plead guilty to the lesser charge.

Allen was acquitted April 21.

SELECTION:QUALITY AND VALUE

Joseph Allan Benoit, 717 Pandora, apparently refused to enter the courtroom voluntarily but was taken by the arms until he was seated on a chair before Judge William Ostler.

Benoit was charged with deliberately setting fire to a sofa chair and personal clothing earlier Tuesday in his apartment suite.

Benoit, who claimed the fire department set fire to his place twice, was remanded until Thursday so a doctor could check on his mental and physical health.

A 21-year-old Sidney woman was jailed for 10 days after pleading guilty to shoplifting from Eaton's.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Brown and a companion took two pairs of pants and the top into a fitting room, returned the pants and left the store. City police went to the Bastion Inn half an hour later and saw her wearing the top.

Lang said the woman had been convicted of theft July 3, 1975, and of possession of stolen property Oct. 13, 1976, and was given suspended sentences and probation both times.

A 19-year-old who told Ostler he would rather smoke dope than drink alcohol with his welfare money was jailed seven days for possession of hashish.

Michael Joseph Pouliotte, who wasn't able to give the court his address because he had only been there a week and a half, pleaded guilty and Crown counsel George Walton told the court Pouliotte and two others were seen Saturday night exchanging money at Government and Trounce Alley. When they saw police, Walton continued, they dispersed but Pouliotte was stopped and searched by the officers, who found two packages of hashish on him.

Walton said Pouliotte was convicted of possession of a narcotic March 2, 1979, and given a suspended sentence and three months probation and of breaking and entering March 9, 1979, when he was given a three-month jail term.

After Pouliotte told the judge he had only been out of jail for a week and a half, Ostler asked where he got the money for the hash.

Pouliotte said he was on welfare. When Ostler asked if he thought welfare money was to purchase drugs, the accused said he didn't drink and added, "I'd rather smoke drugs than drink."

Two teen-agers were jointly charged with theft under $200 from the corporation of the city of Victoria, possession of stolen money and mischief causing wilful damage to parking meters on Sunday.

Brian Darryn Curson, 17, of 866 Craigflower, and Robert Forrest Dudman, 18, of Nanaimo, were released on their own undertaking to appear and remanded until next Wednesday for plea.

Curson was also charged separately with wilful damage to a parking meter.

Apology given to jury panel

A jury panel of 61 waited for four hours at B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday and ended up being sent home after a 33-year-old man dismissed his lawyer and obtained an adjournment to the next sitting of the Assize — Nov. 26.

Mr. Justice Harold Callaghan apologized to the jury for the delay and inconvenience.

In answers to a series of questions from Callaghan following a meeting in his chambers with lawyers from both sides as well as the accused, Thomas Young Lackey, also known as Gary Wallace Ross, confirmed that he wanted an adjournment and now knew that meant his trial wouldn't begin until Nov. 26.

He also confirmed that he does not want Vancouver lawyer Peter Ritchie as his counsel.

Callaghan then pointed out to him he can only be represented in court by someone who is a member of the bar.

When Lackey said he understood but didn't see where in the Canadian Bill of Rights that counsel must be a member of the bar, Callaghan replied that he had told him the position of the court.

Lackey is accused of committing five offences in Saanich Nov. 8:

1. Possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.
2. Armed robbery of a motor vehicle.
3. Using a shotgun during flight after committing an indictable offence.
4. Attempted murder of Saanich Sgt. William Hillcoat by shooting him with a shotgun.
5. Discharging a shotgun with intend to wound Hillcoat or to prevent his arrest or detention.

Charge dismissed after no-shows

A drug charge against two people was dismissed in county court Tuesday by Judge Montague Drake for lack of evidence after two prosecution witnesses subpoenaed to attend did not show up.

Crown counsel Allan Tryon told Drake he had no explanation why the witnesses, both RCMP constables, were not in court.

After Allan Randolph Adderley and Lorraine Bernice Solomon pleaded not guilty to trafficking in a substance held out to be MDA in Victoria Oct. 10, Tryon sought an adjournment but this was opposed by the defence.

He then called no evidence and the case was dismissed.

Also in county court, Drake suspended sentence for Michael Joseph Potvin, 32, who pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm in a beer parlor fight July 23 in which another man suffered a cut face.

Anything goes in sandwich

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

Something different in open faced sandwiches

You can't judge a book — or a regular sandwich — by its cover. Open-face sandwiches, on the other hand, reveal their contents in all their glory to tempt even the most jaded appetites.

Great for brunch, lunch, parties or an impromptu snack, open-faced sandwiches can be whatever you want them to be — petit hors d'oeuvres or gargantuous submarines.

Creativity is the key word when making open-face sandwiches. "Anything goes" as you combine assorted textures and flavors. Use whatever is at hand — breads, meats, fruit, vegetables, cheese, nuts and seasonings.

A protein-rich cheese or egg open-face sandwich with a crisp salad accompaniment and dessert makes an inexpensive, nutritious "knife and fork" dinner.

CHEESE 'N' PEACH SANDWICH

(Makes 6 servings)

- 1 can (14-oz.) sliced peaches, drained
- 2 tablespoons brandy
- 6 slices oatmeal or rye bread
- Butter
- Hot mustard
- 6 slices cooked ham
- 2 cups shredded Edam, Gouda or Cheddar cheese

Sprinkle sliced peaches with brandy; allow to marinate a few minutes. Toast bread slices on one side only. Lightly spread untoasted side with butter and a little hot mustard. Top each slice with ham slice, a layer of brandied peaches and then shredded cheese.

Grill under broiler 2-3 minutes until cheese melts or place in 350°F oven 5-7 minutes. Serve on individual sandwich plates with knife and fork.

SUSAN'S SANDWICH

(Makes 6-8 sandwiches)

- 1 cup chopped chichen, tuna or ham
- 1 cup shredded Edam, Gouda or Cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- Pinch of nutmeg
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 4 English muffins or crusty rolls
- Tomato slices

Mix together chicken, cheese, celery, onion, mayonnaise, lemon juice and nutmeg. Spread on split English muffins or crusty rolls. Place under broiler 3-4 minutes until cheese melts or bake in 350°F oven 10 minutes. Garnish with tomato slices.

SUSIE'S STUFFED ROLLS

ZUCCHINI AND EGG SANDWICH

(Makes 12 sandwiches)

- ½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 2 garlic cloves, crushed
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon horseradish
- 12 hard-cooked eggs
- 6 cups (about 1 pound) thinly sliced zucchini
- Lettuce
- 12 slices whole wheat bread, buttered
- Paprika
- Tomatoes

Combine mayonnaise or salad dressing, garlic, salt, pepper and horseradish. Slice 24 slices of egg; reserve for garnish. Chop remaining egg; add with zucchini to marinade; chill.

Place lettuce leaf on each slice of bread; spoon on chilled zucchini mixture. Top with egg slices; sprinkle with paprika. Garnish with sliced tomatoes, cucumber fingers or carrot curls.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

When wipers don't sweep the windshield rain-free, rub laundry-time fabric softener onto the rubber blades. The softener lubricates the rubber, making it more squishy on the glass. If that doesn't help, could be wax on the glass, which it takes a strong vinegar solution to remove.

* * *

If you're tempted to spread leftover lawn fertilizer (without weed killer) onto your flowers or planted vegetables, limit the leftover to leafy vegetables which want lots of nitrogen. Too much nitrogen will make tomatoes, for example, go to vine, make the fruit watery and less flavorful. Too much nitrogen on flowers makes them a lush green but with fewer blossoms.

Don't toss out stale crusts

Buying sliced bread seems to lead to more wasted bread than when loaves are sliced at the table as required, yet how seldom this old practice is found today.

Few people will halve a slice before taking it to their plate even when knowing that a half slice is the amount they will eat. The remainder is perhaps put away with the rest of the slices and ignored. Then it becomes stale and is discarded.

And the sometimes very thick crust ends — what happens to them? Too thick for a sandwich, not quite thick enough to give another slice — they sometimes end up in the bread storage tin as stale bread.

If this happens in your home, don't miss the chance to gather a few suggestions for making good use of stale bread. Some of these ideas will not only use the stale bread in a novel way but will save you money by making a byproduct of bread which you may at present be buying ready made.

Seasoned Bread Crumbs are useful as topping for baked casseroles, dishes of macaroni, mixed vegetables, or for coating meat loaves or patties. When used as stuffing in a soybean loaf they add a delicious new flavor.

Here is how to make five cups of the mixture from stale bread which may already be on hand. To use up a cupful of crumbs, reduce all quantities accordingly.

SEASONED BREAD CRUMBS

5 cups dried bread crumbs (white or brown, or mixed)
3 Tsbp softened margarine OR sunflower oil
2 tsp salt
¼ tsp black pepper
½ tap curry powder
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 Tbsp chopped chives
¼ tsp fresh chopped thyme

Prepare bread crumbs, including crusts, by cutting with sharp knife into small pieces. Work down in large mixing with hands to make crumbs. If toasted bread is included, put into paper bag and crush with rolling pin.

In bowl, dribble margarine or oil over crumbs and toss with wooden forks or spoons to coat evenly.

If not being used at once, the seasoned crumbs may be stored frozen in plastic bag or rigid container. When a portion is used, exclude air from package before returning to freezer. A crumbled wad of wrapping film prevents air contact before closing the tub with lid.

If not freezing, crumbs may be stored in a glass jar, with wrapping film crammed into the top to exclude air beneath the screw-on lid. Store in refrigerator for two to three weeks.

For some uses, fresh crushed garlic can be added to the portion of seasoned crumbs for additional flavor. Particularly good when stuffing a soybean loaf, but wait until the fresh crop of garlic comes from your garden or into the vegetable displays.

Toast Cubes, or Croutons, for serving either on top of soups or as an accompaniment to soup are handy to have and easy enough to make from stale bread. They are as useful to one person eating alone as to a family, and they add an unexpected touch of elegance to a simple meal as well as a little extra nutrition.

To make Crutons, or Toast Cubes, cut stale slices into half-inch cubes, brown on a cookie tray in warm oven 165°C shaking once or twice to brown all sides. Store when cool in a glass jar with screw cap.

For Toasted Crumbs for many uses, crush the toasted cubes with rolling pin in a paper bag to avoid crumbs all over the place. Store in a glass jar with lid if not all used.

Bread Sticks are something usually found only at salad bars or as snacks at buffet meals. To make them easily at home for any occasion, cut sliced (stale) bread into half-inch sticks from top to bottom of each slice, including crusts.

Lightly toast on a cookie tray, then brush with soft margarine or butter, dip into grated cheese and sprinkle with paprika and chopped parsley, or use celery seed, dill seed, wheat germ or finely chopped chives. Suit yourself and your family and guests.

A generous quantity of bread crumbs, always with their crusts, added to various vegetable dishes give a similar texture, flavor and color as does ground beef or other meat. Wholewheat, rye or other grain breads will be most nutritious. Improve white bread crumbs with wheat germ.

Here is Quick Pan-Fry Supper using a little leftover cooked rice (preferably brown rice) and a few spoonfuls of cooked soy beans. Extended with day-old (at least) breadcrumbs to make a delicious supper dish of 4 servings.

QUICK PAN-FRY SUPPER

2 tbsp margarine
1 Tbsp chopped chives
2 Tbsp chopped parsley
2 Tbsp thinly sliced celery with leaves
½ cup thinly sliced carrot
1 cup cut-up chard, spinach or other fresh greens
½ cup cooked rice
¼ cup cooked mashed soy beans
4 cups wholewheat bread crumbs seasoning salt, thyme, paprika, a few grains of each

Melt margarine in skillet or frypan. Add carrot and celery; cook gently with lid on until becoming soft. Add remaining vegetables, put lid on and cook gently for about 3 minutes longer.

If liquid has cooked away, add either a half cup boiling water or of previous vegetable cooking water, or tomato juice. Add a tablespoon of lemon juice to plain water for flavor (and nutrients).

Now stir in cooked rice, soy beans and bread crumbs. Bring to just under boiling point; add seasonings. Stir to mix well. Taste for further seasoning. Serve hot.

You can see from this sample recipe that anything (well, almost) among vegetables and cooked grains will be acceptable in a similar dish. The bread crumbs are used as a nutritious extender, and a means of cutting out waste of a basic food — Bread.

Lamb: a succulent delicacy

60-MINUTE GOURMET

By PIERRE FRANEY

The finest of lamb is one of the great, and expensive delicacies. It has been observed before that lamb has limited qualities where cooking in less than 60 minutes is concerned. Among the few dishes besides simply grilled or broiled chops that require a brief period in preparation and cooking is a dish, admittedly costly. It's called noisettes d'agneau a l'anglaise: boneless lamb chops English style.

The name a l'anglaise is used in several ways in a French kitchen. At times it means foods cooked in water. In this case it implies a breaded dish sauteed in oil with hazelnut-brown butter poured over when ready to serve. The noisettes, made from the choicest parts of loin lamb chops, are fork-tender and eminently edible.

The total cooking time on the noisettes or medallions is less than five minutes. It may be added that there is a final culinary conceit in the preparation of this dish. The butter is delicately scented with chopped tarragon, a flavor that marries admirably well with lamb.

The lamb itself could be accompanied by a simple platter of boiled parsley potatoes. An excellent salad for the meal would be cold green beans with a well-seasoned vinaigrette sauce.

BREADED LAMB MEDALLIONS

8 loin lamb chops, each about six ounces and about one inch thick
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons flour
1 large egg, beaten
1 tablespoon water
1½ cups bread crumbs
3 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
¼ cup butter
1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon or 1 teaspoon dried.

1. Hack off or have the butcher hack off the top chine bone and cut away the rib bone of each chop. Trim away all but a light layer of fat from around the chop. Using a flat mallet, lightly flatten each chop. When flattened, the meat should be about half an inch thick.

2. Sprinkle the medallions on both sides with salt and pepper. Dredge lightly in flour and shake off excess. Beat the egg with the water. Drop the medallions in the egg mixture to coat well. Place in the bread crumbs and dredge to coat thoroughly on both sides. Pat lightly with the side of a heavy meat knife to help the crumbs adhere.

3. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet large enough to hold the medallions in one layer. Add the medallions and cook about one and one-half minutes or until golden brown on one side. Continue cooking until golden brown on the other side, about two minutes. Remove the chops to warm serving dish.

4. Heat the butter in a skillet until it is foamy and turns a hazelnut brown. Do not let it burn. Remove from the heat and add the tarragon. Stir quickly and pour the sauce over the medallions.

Yield: 4 servings.

GREEN BEANS WITH VINAIGRETTE SAUCE

¾ pound green beans
Salt to taste
½ cup vinaigrette sauce.

1. Trim or snap off the ends of the beans. Otherwise, leave the beans whole. Drop them into boiling salted water and cook until crisp-tender, about five minutes. Do not over cook.

2. Drain the beans and run them briefly under cold running water. Drain again while the beans are still warm.

3. Put the beans in a bowl and pour the vinaigrette sauce over them. Toss briefly and serve.

VINAIGRETTE SAUCE

1 teaspoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
¼ cup peanut or olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Put the mustard, shallots, garlic, parsley and vinegar in a mixing bowl.

2. Gradually add the oil while stirring with a wire whisk. Add salt and pepper to taste. Stir until well blended.

Yield: About ½ cup.

Try roast goose, the self-basting bird

Roast goose is the change of pace from traditional meals according to the Canadian Waterfowl Council. Goose is entirely dark meat, tender, moist and full of robust flavor. It's easy to prepare and naturally self-basting.

The average 10-pound store-bought goose will feed about eight people. It is the original Thanksgiving bird, a traditional dish for festive occasions such as Christmas and Easter, and a treat for special events such as birthdays, barbecues and Father's Day.

Golden goose is much more than a fairy tale. Properly roasted, it meets the demands of gourmets, health enthusiasts and housewives. It is also still enjoyed today by many central and northern Europeans and is one of the delicacies of Oriental cuisine.

Goslings are raised on open ranges, eating a natural diet that includes whole cereal grains. By the time they're slaughtered at five or six months of age, they've enjoyed a full share of sunshine and absolutely no chemical additivies.

For the gourmet, goose lends itself to exotic dinners featuring a golden bird with crackling skin and delicious stuffings or side dishes. One stuffing, for instance can be made with oranges, apples, raisins, walnuts and orange juice. Other recipes call for cranberry, prunes, bacon, honey, maple syrup or apricots.

For the housewife, basic roast goose is easy to prepare. Just thaw, put on a rack in the oven and forget about it until dinner time. A thin layer of fat under the skin makes it a 'self-baster'. The dark meat remains moist and the skin turns a golden crispy brown as the bird roasts. A trayful of drippings can be saved and used for flavoring dishes in later meals.

Roast goose, a change of pace

Frozen goose also keeps much longer in the freezer than most other meats. The natural layer of fat prevents the bird from drying out and suffering freezer burn.

For a real change of pace this month, try these recipes featuring Manitoba Golden Goose. For more information and recipes, write to the Canadian Waterfowl Council, Box 510, Teulon, Manitoba R0C 3B0.

CRANBERRY-BACON STUFFING

- ½ lb. bacon diced
- 2 cups chopped celery
- 2 cups shredded carrots
- 4 cups day-old bread cubes
- 1 cup cranberry juice cocktail
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup chopped parsley

In a large saucepan, fry bacon until crisp. Saute celery and carrots in bacon drippings until wilted. Stir in remaining ingredients. Use mixture to stuff goose. Makes enough stuffing for a 10-pound goose.

PRUNE-WALNUT STUFFING

- 6 cups bread cubes
- 1 cup coarsely shopped pitted prunes
- 2 apples, cored and sliced
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
- 2 eggs
- ½ cup orange juice
- ¼ cup melted fat
- 1¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine all ingredients and toss lightly to mix. Makes enough stuffing for an 8 to 10 pound goose or may be baked in a 2-quart casserole during the last 45 minutes of goose roasting time.

APPLE-ORANGE WALNUT STUFFING

- 6 cups day-old bread cubes
- 1 cup diced navel orange sections
- 2 cups diced apples
- ½ cup raisins
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
- ½ cup orange juice
- ¼ cup melted fat

Combine all ingredients and toss lightly to mix. Makes enough stuffing for an 8 to 10 pound goose.

Smokes worsen hoarseness

My voice is getting more hoarse each year. I've been told to stop smoking but, like many people, I just can't do it. It's now gotten to the point where people say, "Yes, sir" to me when I call on the phone. Could I be developing something serious? — Miss E.E.S.

Dear Miss S.:

Your specific fear of cancer of the larynx, or voice box, is apparent in your letter. Tobacco is an irritant to the vocal cords, and to the entire lining of the bronchial tubes in the lungs. Although cancer of the larynx is relatively rare in women, it is important that a thorough examination of the vocal cords be made to be sure that no such problem exists.

In many instances, polyps of the vocal cords are responsible for progressive hoarseness. These are usually benign, or non-cancerous. When there is no cessation of smoking and when vocal rest is neglected, these polypoid changes of the vocal cords become larger and interfere with the clarity of the speech.

When hoarseness exists, more pressure is put on the vocal cords to maintain the normal quality of speech. This accounts for the fact that your hoarseness is getting progressively more apparent.

If the polyps continue to get larger, surgery is the only way they can be removed. Yet, even after surgery, the polyps may quickly return unless smoking habits are modified and voice abuse is rectified.

I'm worried about a birthmark over my left breast. How can I tell if my concern is reasonable? — Mrs. M.R.

There are many types of birthmarks and moles. They are classed as "nevi" (the plural of "nevus"). These areas of discoloration vary in size, color, thickness and appearance. They are found on the skin on all parts of the body. Consequently, it is most important that your family doctor or a skin specialist (dermatologist) examine the birthmark to establish a definitive diagnosis.

"Worry" is no part of a sensible process for treating such a condition. Many people spend years unnecessarily consumed by fear about a skin mark that is totally insignificant. The assurance that you get from such an examination would probably eliminate the fears you are living with.

It is a firm rule that any birthmark that changes in size or character most certainly be kept under the observation of a physician. Have this done and write again to tell me that you have been freed from the albatross of anxiety.

Analyst aids the elderly

By C. G. McDaniel

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. psychoanalyst who is bucking tradition by treating old people says therapy can free the aged of psychosomatic illness and conflicts, improve their ability to enjoy others and help them be more tolerant.

"We have been doing our people a disservice by emphasizing dying with dignity instead of living with creativity," said Dr. George Pollock, director of the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis and former president of the American Psychoanalytic Association.

Traditionally, U.S. psychoanalysts have not accepted middle-aged and older patients for psychoanalysis, said Pollock. This stems in large part from the teachings of Sigmund Freud, who held that the rigidity which develops with age was a barrier to successful analysis.

Also in Freud's time, Pollock said, physicians did not know much about the biological changes that occur during menopause and people in the late 19th and early 20th centuries did not live as long as they do now.

Additional work with the elderly should convince therapists that age in itself should not be considered a barrier to analysis. He said he has worked successfully with patients in their 60s, 70s and 80s.

Pollock said in a recent interview that his interest in analytic treatment of the elderly is an outgrowth of his research into the mourning process.

Successful aging, Pollock said, is tied to the ability to mourn for the loss of a former state and the failure to realize all of life's ambitions.

He said that with successful mourning for "the loss of parts of the self that once were, that one hoped might be but will not any longer," there comes "an ability to face reality as it is and as it can be changed to provide a greater quality of life."

And he said such therapy can help individuals improve or re-establish sexual pleasures and consider alternative careers late in life.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: When my son, his wife and their baby come to my home for dinner I always put newspapers under the baby's high chair. My son told me that his wife will not allow him to place newspapers under the baby's high chair at home because it is "low-class." She claims that it's all right when feeding animals, but not children!

Abby, I certainly would never put my grandchildren in the same class with animals. I'm only trying to protect my dining room rug.

I have placed newspapers under high chairs with all my children and now my five grandchildren, and I've never had any complaints until now.

Am I out of line? Or is my daughter-in-law?

SOCORRO

DEAR SOCORRO: She is. And you may place THIS under the baby's high chair.

DEAR ABBY: I got a big kick out of that etiquette-conscious couple who asked about the socially acceptable way to list their names on their mailbox. Since they have obviously chosen to thumb their noses at convention by living together without marriage, it seems a little ridiculous to fret about the "proper" way to do anything.

CONVENTIONAL

DEAR ABBY: I have a lovely 17-year-old daughter who has been dating two boys — both 18 and from fine homes. These boys have slapped my daughter around when she does something they don't like. (Paying attention to other boys, for example.)

Is this considered normal adolescent behavior, or are these two boys potential wife abusers?

My daughter likes both boys very much. I say she is foolish to continue to put up with this kind of treatment.

MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Slapping girls around is definitely not normal adolescent behavior. But hanging around to be repeatedly slapped around is not normal either. Not only do the boys need help — so does your daughter.

Dating service grows

TORONTO (CP) — When Molly Kagen founded Help Mate last year, she had intended to establish an ordinary low-priced dating service.

That was before she discovered what a "hell of a mess" Toronto's singles marketplace is for many people.

Today, her introduction service has evolved into a kind of night school on social skills.

More than 95 per cent of her student clients are men in their 20s and early 30s. She describes them as inhibited and insecure people, uneducated and inexperienced in the art of social survival.

Although she still supplies introductions to compatible women for $50, Mrs. Kagen has found that most of her clients are not yet at the introduction stage.

They need practice and confidence before they play the male-female game, says the 49-year-old widow, who is offering classes in modern etiquette.

She has set up a series of Saturday night "socials" for men in their late 20s and early 30s and a series of Thursday night get-togethers for younger men.

"These are extremely shy individuals," she says. "They have no idea how to communicate with women.

"I want to help them learn how to read body language, how to interpret the tone of voice as well as what is being said."

Mrs. Kagen says inexperienced men often go to bars and discos and head straight for the prettiest, most active woman in the room. Inevitably they are rejected, but rarely understand why.

One of her social-skill exercises involves taking several young men to a downtown disco and having them sit by themselves for at least an hour, watching how other people, particularly women, act.

"Then I want them to get up and ask a girl who hasn't been dancing to dance with them."

Mrs. Kagen, a mother of five, discovered loneliness first-hand more than a year ago when her husband died.

She maintains that a person's loneliness can not be blamed on large impersonal urban centres, but rather on the individual's background, which makes him a victim of psychic isolation.

"So many people have a low self-image, a lack of confidence, because of poor family backgrounds," she says.

"One young man called me the other day and said he was turning into an alcoholic because girls wouldn't pay attention to him, and he didn't know what to do about it."

Mrs. Kagen worked for several years at a Salvation Army correctional home for delinquents.

She feels that experience as well as her own background as a parent and the solid advice from a psychologist consultant all combine to make her service unique.

Ex-Nazi to Bonn

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Karl Carstens, a 65-year-old Christian Democrat, won election today as West Germany's fifth president.

Carstens, a Protestant from Bremen, defeated Annemarie Renger, the candidate of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democrats and the first woman ever nominated to be head of state.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's liberal Free Democrats refused to support Mrs. Renger's candidacy, a development that boded ill for the future of the government coalition.

About 1,200 persons conducted a peaceful demonstration nearby, protesting because Carstens had joined the Nazi party in 1937 in order to complete his law studies. A court declared after the Second World War that he had never been an active Nazi, however.

N-test isle hazard report hushed by U.S. officials

WASHINGTON (WP) — A restricted U.S. government report asserts that the return of former residents to the U.S. nuclear test site at Eniwetok Atoll could still expose them to possibly dangerous dosages of radiation.

Representatives of the newly created government of the Marshall Islands accuse the U.S. government of "bad faith" for withholding the draft report from public circulation.

Between 1948 and '58, the United States conducted 43 nuclear weapons tests on the Pacific atoll.

The general accounting office report on the $100 million cleanup of nuclear contamination has been passed around selectively within the government since May 8. Comptroller General Elmer Staats said in the report that public release "would not be in the best interest of the government" because of current negotiations with the Marshallese.

At one point, the GAO report notes that "because of the uncertainty of the long-term effects of exposure to low-level radiation, it is possible that the people of Eniwetok could receive radiation doses "in excess of current standards."

It also reports that "Environmental Protection Agency sources" believe those standards will be lowered and in that situation "there is a good possibility" that "their doses could eventually be considered excessive . . ."

The Marhsall Islands government took office May 1, after voting for separate status from other Micronesian areas that once were U.S. trust territories.

On May 16, at the request of the Marshall Island officials, a meeting was held in Washington to discuss turning over to the new government any material "which may bear on the welfare of the people of the Marshalls affected by the tests."

The Marshallese heard about the report two days later, and requested and received a copy from Ambassador Peter Rosenblatt, chief of the U.S. delegaton for the Micronesian negotiations.

Richard Copaken, a Washington lawyer acting as counsel to the new Marshallese government, said his clients "wonder what else is being held back and why."

Rosenblatt said that the report had "not deliberately" been withhold but that no one at the May 16 meeting "considered it newsworthy or important."

"When they mentioned it to me," he said, "I immediately handed them a copy."

Complicating the problem over Eniwetok, its safety and future status is the fact that during the last years of the U.S. trusteeship, the atoll leaders and their lawyer, Theodore Mitchell, not the new Marhsall Islands government, had worked out details of the cleanup.

Distraught Scott describes frightening night on moors

LONDON (Reuter) — Male model Norman Scott told a jury Tuesday how a gunman shot his dog then told him it was his turn to die in a murder plot alleged to have been hatched by former Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe.

Scott also admitted under cross-examination that even before the date in 1961 when he says Thorpe seduced him he pretended that the politician was his homosexual lover.

Choking back tears, Scott described how he was lured to a desolate, windswept moor on an October night in 1975.

The gunman, he said, shot dead his Great Dane bitch, Rinka, then pointed the gun at him and said: "It's your turn now."

But he did not fire. The prosecution has alleged that either the gun jammed or the gunman lost his nerve.

Cursing, he drove away saying, "I will get you," Scott told the judge and jury who are trying Thorpe and three co-defendants on charges of plotting the murder attempt.

The jury at the Old Bailey has already heard Scott testify that in 1961, when he was a young groom, Thorpe seduced him.

Thorpe has pleaded not guilty to the murder plot charges and strenuously denies Scott's testimony.

Under cross-examination Tuesday by Thorpe's lawyer George Carman, Scott admitted that after meeting Thorpe briefly in 1960, he falsely told friends that he and Thorpe were lovers.

Scott also admitted that he regaled fellow drinkers with his story in taverns in North Devon, then Thorpe's parliamentary constituency.

The prosecution has alleged that Thorpe — fearful for his career — wanted Scott silenced and that Andrew Newton, an airline pilot, was hired as an assassin for £10,000 ($24,000).

Newton was later jailed for having a firearm with intent to endanger life. He said nothing at his 1976 trial about having been hired in a plot instigated by Thorpe.

Thorpe has pleaded not guilty to two counts, incitement and conspiracy to murder, each carrying a possible 10-year sentence. His co-defendants, charged only with conspiracy, have also pleaded not guilty.

David Holmes, best man at Thorpe's wedding in 1968, is alleged to have managed the murder plot. Night club owner George Deakin, who also deals in slot machines, is accused of hiring the gunman.

Carpet dealer John Le Mesurier is accused of paying Newton half the alleged contract fee when he was freed from jail.

A distraught Scott demonstrated in the oak-panelled witness stand how Newton, after killing the dog, clenched his hands and raised both arms, levelling the gun, which the prosecution says was an antique Mauser pistol.

Greece joining EEC

ATHENS (AP) — Greece joins the European Common Market Monday, increasing its membership from nine countries to 10.

The Athens treaty signing ceremony will mark the final stage of a long and turbulent period of negotiations.

Greece became an associate member of the European Economic Community (EEC) in 1961 but relations were cut back between 1967 and 1974 when the country was governed by a military dictatorship.

In recent years, moves toward full Greek membership in the community have been rapid, leading to the earlier-than-expected treaty signing.

After the treaty is signed Monday, the Greek parliament must approve the document. So must the parliaments of the nine member countries as well as the community's European parliament, which is holding elections June 6-10.

Amin's henchman faces murder trial

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Uganda's new leaders are preparing murder charges against Bob Astles, a British-born adviser of ousted dictator Idi Amin.

A spokesman said murder and other criminal charges will be brought within two weeks, which will allow extradition proceedings to begin against Astles, who is being held in police custody in Kenya.

He fled there across Lake Victoria ahead of Tanzanian-led anti-Amin forces advancing on Kampala early last month.

The spokesman for the office of Uganda's director of public prosecutions said: "We have evidence of several murders personally committed by Astles.

"We are still investigating a number of other criminal charges which include smuggling and illegal money transactions," he added.

Astles, a Ugandan citizen who was given the honorary rank of major by Amin, once described himself as Amin's "odd-job man."

Ugandan exiles accused Astles of helping to set up the dreaded state research bureau, held responsible for many of the killings carried out during Amin's dictatorship.

Under Ugandan law, any charges against Astles must be made in a magistrate's court, and a warrant issued for his arrest.

Extradition from Kenya will be sought under an old colonial law under which a prima facie case must be established against the defendent in a Kenyan court.

The defendent then has two weeks in which to appeal. If the appeal fails, the defendant must be returned to Uganda to face trial.

12 runaway senators return

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Twelve Democratic senators — antic heroes to some, fugitive obstructionists to others — have returned to the Texas state senate.

The 12 Democrats disappeared Friday, robbing the senate of a quorum until they returned Tuesday. In the process, they nearly assured defeat of a presidential-primary bill thought to be tailor-made for former governor John Connally.

While the senators were gone, the Texas Rangers were called in but couldn't find them.

When the senators returned, they told how they had done it.

Ten hid out in a one-room house within eight kilometres of the Capitol — although one of those later fled the close quarters in favor of a smoke-free atmosphere in Houston. Another was in Oklahoma and the 12th was near the Mexican border.

Meanwhile, Lt.-Gov. Bill Hobby had called in the Rangers. But the best they could do was the mistaken arrest on Sunday of the brother of Senator Gene Jones.

The senators returned to the Capitol in a motorcade escorted by state troopers.

Only 19 senators had stayed at their desks, two short of the 21 needed for a quorum. Now, little time is left to complete business before the legislative session ends at midnight Monday night, and Senator A. R. Schwartz said: "I'm absolutely convinced SB1149 (the primary bill) is a dead bill for this session."

The runaway senators had objected to the separate primary on the theory it would make it easy for conservative Democrats to vote for Connally in the Republican presidential primary and then switch back to elect conservative Democrats in the state primary in May.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	3♡	Pass

Opening lead — king of spades.

It's easy to make four hearts if you look at all four hands. You lose two spade tricks and a diamond, but you don't lose a trump trick because you finesse against East's queen.

However, if you don't see the East-West cards, your task is much more difficult. Thus, you might decide to play the A-K of trumps and thus go down one. How do you resolve troublesome problems of this type? Well, the fact is that you're not expected to guess the location of a missing queen all the time, just most of the time.

Consider this deal where declarer had no trouble making the contract. West led the king of spades, overtaken by East with the ace. East returned a spade to South's jack and West's queen, and West then played the ten of spades, ruffed by declarer after East discarded a club.

Instead of tackling trumps immediately, which seems the instinctive thing to do, South embarked on a method of play that he hoped would shed light on the probable location of the missing queen.

He cashed the A-K-Q of clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy, and next cashed the K-A of diamonds as both opponents followed in both suits. South now exited from dummy with a diamond, won by East with the queen.

By this time declarer had accumulated all the information he needed to solve his trump problem. West had shown up with six spades, three diamonds and three clubs, and he therefore could not have started with more than one trump in his hand. So when East returned a club at trick ten, South ruffed it in dummy, played the king of trumps, and then finessed the jack with a 100 per cent assurance that it would win the trick.

Tomorrow: It happened in Dead Man's Gulch.

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It was inevitable that Ricky Schroder, the freckled nine-year old star of The Champ would be snapped up by Disney, which is starring the moppet in The Last Flight of Noah's Ark

The tow-headed youngster resembles a Disney cartoon character come to life, but in truth he a Staten Island kid with a Brooklyn accent, thanks to his parents, Diane and Richard Schroder who were reared in that hallowed borough of New York City.

Ricky is an uninhibited tot, unspoiled as yet by his new-found celebrity. His mother and father are determined to keep him that way.

During lunch on the studio commissary patio Ricky demolished a chocolate ice cream cone, anxious to be finished. He was chafing to return to the set where a collection of sheep, goats and chickens are among his costars. Also Elliott Gould and Genevieve Bujold.

"I like Brutus better than Shesalady, the horse in The Champ Race horses kick a lot, boy. She threw me three times. Once she bucked me straight up in the air."

Ricky is a movie-TV fan. He shook hands with the Fonz on the Happy Days set.

"I've seen Mr. Wayne's pictures on TV," Ricky said. "When we were introduced, I said, 'How do you do, Mr. Wayne.' And he said, 'Call me John.'"

Baby Peggy — Diana Serra Cary, 60, — recalls when she was a child star

TORONTO (CP) — Diana Serra Cary, known as Baby Peggy when a child star in Hollywood, says don't put your daughter on the stage.

"Unless kids come from a family with a tradition of the theatre, most wind up in later life with multiple marriages, nervous breakdowns, drinking problems, financial bankruptcy, and sometimes, attempted suicide," said the woman who once got $1 million a year as a Hollywood child star.

During the 1920s, she got $10,000 a week as Baby Peggy, adored by millions for her Dutch-bob bangs and cute manner in more than 100 two-reel movies. She played a tearful waif or did comic impressions of Rudolph Valentino, Mary Pickford or other idols of the silent screen.

She is author of the new book Hollywood's Children: An Inside Account of the Child Star Era In it, she recounts her own experiences as well as the growing-up tribulations of other child stars she knew, such as Shirley Temple, Jackie Coogan, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland.

"And that includes me. We were showbiz freaks. Most of us were family breadwinners, play-acting miniature adults before kindergarten age. And most of us never did grow up knowing what adult stability is all about."

Baby Peggy now is 60 but youthful looking. She is five-foot-four, weighs 130 pounds and has just a few silver streaks in her black hair, which she says is its natural color.

Mrs. Cary, after initial success as Baby Peggy, found herself experiencing emotional upheavals as the character's popularity began to wane. She later tried to make a comeback, at $2,000 a week, as a singing and dancing adolescent on the vaudeville circuit.

"People resented me growing older," she said in an interview.

"I reminded them of their own aging process. They felt I had somehow set out maliciously to destroy the Baby Peggy they loved.

"I was humiliated to hear them say repeatedly to my face: You used to be such a darling child. My, how you've changed."

Even more crushing was the rejection by her parents when they lost their prime bread-winner. A relative, put in charge by her father to manage the Baby Peggy Corporation, absconded with all the funds and ran off with an oil heiress.

Elton John wows Soviets

LENINGRAD (AP) — Elton John said Tuesday that the surprise success of his first Soviet concert has inspired him to write a song based on his trip to Russia.

"I've been tinkling the ivories this morning and I've come up with something," the 32-year-old British rock star told reporters at an informal news conference.

John also said that Soviet officials have given the go-ahead to sell an expected 100,000 copies of his new hit album, A Single Man

The singer's manager, John Reid, said the exact details of the contract were still under discussion "but it's all agreed."

John said Vladimir Kokonin, the deputy director of the official Soviet concert agency, Goskonsert, congratulated him on the success of his Monday night concert, even though thousands of young people chanting "El-ton, El-ton" went into a frenzy during the performance.

There had been some speculation that the Soviet officials might be displeased with the wild crowd that characterized John's initial appearance. But there were no Soviet moves under way to cancel any of the seven more concerts John will make, the singer said.

Switch to sail seen for cargo ships

By WALTER SULLIVAN

NEW YORK (NYT) — Several prominent naval architects and engineers have begun to envision New York Harbor teeming with cargo vessels bearing the vans now carried on container ships but propelled by large triangular sails.

One expert even maintains that such craft could be introduced by 1984 as the price of oil continues to soar and wind power becomes economically attractive, at least on certain routes and for certain cargoes.

The proposed craft — making use of design advances resulting from wind tunnel and tank tests and carrying outsize sails made possible by the development of strong synthetic fabrics — would not resemble the sailing ships in old prints.

The vessels would be rigged to minimize crew size, probably lacking booms or spars, so no one would have to risk his life by going aloft in heavy seas. Auxiliary engines would enable the ships to steam in light air and sail closer to the direction from which the wind is coming than would otherwise be possible.

A contract is being negotiated with the United States Maritime Administration by a group of naval architects — one a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology — that would provide $108,000 for initial assessment of the feasibility of the new breed of sailing ships. To make possible computer-based comparisons of wind and fossil fuel, two shipping companies have agreed to provide data on the nature of their shipments, their finances and their routes.

Those most enthusiastic about the return to sail seem to be naval architects who sail their own yachts. Lester Rosenblatt, president of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers and himself a yachtsman, says he thinks the idea "has got real potential." And Lloyd Bergeson, also a naval architect and a sailor, concluded an article in MIT's Technology Review by asking rhetorically whether the conversion to sail power will really take place, then responding: "Definitely." Ultimately, Bergeson sees half "or even 75 per cent if need be" of ocean transport moved by sail.

Bergeson, an MIT graduate, has been general manager of two major shipyards and co-ordinated construction of the first Polaris missile submarine. He has participated in the design of 20 classes of commercial and naval vessels, including the first large liquified natural gas tanker, and is a member of the American Bureau of Shipping, which certifies one-third of the world's cargo ships for insurance purposes. Last year he sailed alone across the Atlantic.

Also participating in the project to assess a return to wind power are Prof. Henry S. Marcus of the MIT Department of Ocean Engineering and Frank MacLear, a well-known designer of ocean yachts.

They plan to examine both catamaran and single-hulled designs. Catamarans, which have two separate hulls some distance apart, are more stable than single-hull vessels and can therefore carry 20 to 40 per cent more sail but cannot sail as close to the wind. Rosenblatt's firm at 350 Broadway in New York has designed ocean-going catamarans as long as 245 feet, and he believes that the wide span between the twin hulls of such vessels could carry a sizable number of cargo containers.

Under favorable wind conditions, Bergeson says — for example, on a run from Barbados to Puerto Rico — a catamaran could average better than 20 knots. Moreover, catamarans can be beached and unloaded with bow ramps, a capability that would be advantageous in some areas.

To make a cargo-carrying sailing ship fast enough and reliable enough to be economical, Rosenblatt says, it would have to have auxiliary engines about 25 per cent as powerful as the engines required for conventional craft.

Bergeson proposes that such ships have 75 per cent of the power required by conventional craft, adding that a reduced dependence on power would mean that onmost routes such ships would need to carry only a quarter as much fuel as conventional vessels.

He and his partners in the project plan to build two three-masted prototypes — a 180-foot single-hulled craft and a 220-foot catamaran — for ocean trials. The researchers will explore the possibility of fitting both prototypes with one or more centreboards — keels that can be hauled up to reduce drag when the vessel is running before the wind and a keel is superfluous.

While "super sailing ships" of 200,000 deadweight tons (their cargo capacity) are "conceivable," according to Bergeson, they probably would not be practical, and vessels of about 8,000 tons are considered more attractive. The MIT study will consider ships of as much as 48,000 deadweight tons.

The largest sailing vessels of the past — the seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, built at Quincy, Mass., in 1902, and the Preussen, a German square-rigger completed the same year — carried only 8,000 deadweight tons.

A square-rigger like the Preussen with a theoretical hull speed of 22 knots averged only 7.5 knots, largely because the growth of marine organisms on her hull slowed her speed. Moreover, the Preussen's 53 sails were handled by 41 deckhands, and her five masts carried so much rigging that auxiliary power would have been of little help in pushing her against the wind.

Since the heyday of sail, however, anti-fouling paint has been developed to protect metal hulls and boom-free designs applicable to schooner rigs have been devised. Some operate like the roller-reef jibs carried by many yachts today. Under control from the deck, the sail can be wound around a roller extending the full length of the luff, or forward, edge of the sail and just as readily unrolled.

Using such devices, the 4,000 square feet of sail carried by the single-masted, 87-foot cutter Aria, designed by MacLean, can be unfurled or taken in by a crew of three in 40 seconds or by a crew of two in two minutes.

A feasibility study on the modernization of the square rigger that was conducted in the 1960s by the Institute for Ship Building in Hamburg, Germany, indicated that the speed of earlier designs could be more than doubled. A 1974 study at the University of Michigan examined designs as large as 45,000 deadweight tons, but oil prices at that time were not high enough to make such ships seem economical.

The MIT group expects to take about a year for the first phase of its study, then to spend two-and-a-half years building and testing the two prototype ships.

Rosenblatt does not consider nuclear propulsion likely as an alternate replacement for fossil fuels if only because of the radioactive waste disposal problems, and some experts fear that a return to the heavy use of coal in ocean-going vessels would add enough carbon dioxide to the atmosphere to change its transparency characteristics and alter climate.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

4 Cowichan Indians take Ottawa to court

A suit has been filed in B.C. Supreme Court here by four Cowichan Indians claiming damages against the federal government and the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development for allegedly interfering in their business affairs.

Larry Seymour, Joe Sylvester, Gordon Elliott and Dennis Seymour, all principals of Cowichan Tribal Holdings, claim government interference had frustrated or killed their business ventures.

They said they will ask for $100 million damages.

Larry Seymour said Cowichan Tribal Holdings attempted to start several business ventures in co-operation with private investors.

But each time federal officials stepped in at a crucial stage of the development and told the private investors they had to deal with department-selected Indians, who then proceeded to destroy the business venture, he claimed.

The Cowichan Tribal Council is not involved in the lawsuit.

Seymour and Elliott called the Cowichan Tribal Council a "tool" of the Department of Indian Affairs.

They want release of Indian lands so Indians can engage in joint ventures with private businesses without going through the department.

Life quality study set

A graduate sociologist at the University of Victoria has been awarded the first Sara Spencer Foundation Graduate Research award.

Marilyn Crawford will use the $3,000 grant to conduct a study of the quality of life in Victoria.

The awards were established by the Sara Spencer Foundation to enable graduate students to do applied research in the social sciences in the Victoria area.

The foundation also hopes to attract outstanding graduate students to the area from other universities.

Crawford's study will take place between May and August and focus on the problems and attitudes of the elderly.

In an interview Tuesday Crawford said Victoria has double the national average of retired, with 17 per cent of its population 65 or older. More than 30 per cent of Victoria's population is between 55 and 65 years old.

The study forms the basis of Crawford's M.A. thesis in sociology and she and research assistant Dan Paylor will interview by random sample between 600 and 800 Victoria area residents.

A recent housing study of the Victoria Capital Regional District shows 60 per cent of the people who have difficulty paying for housing are either single parents or senior citizens. Most of the 60 per cent were female.

The provincial government won't allow king-size pop bottles on provincial store shelves if they're found to be potentially dangerous, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said today.

A number of the new 1.5-litre glass soft drink bottles were found to explode on impact when knocked over even from ground level in a series of tests by a CBC consumer affairs television program.

He said he will ask the federal safety guidelines investigators to look into the exploding bottles.

The province wants to know what tests have been run on the bottles, he said.

"If they don't have the information, then we will attempt to solve the problem ourselves," he said.

Zoning decision reversed

Saanich council reversed an earlier decision Tuesday night in rejecting a controversial rezoning application for an 11-unit townhouse development on Wicklow Street.

The proposed development by J. McLaren Construction Ltd. was turned down on a split 4-4 vote when the bylaw was presented for first reading, although it had been given initial approval following a public hearing earlier this month.

In the aftermath of that hearing, residents opposed to further townhouse development on Wicklow complained that their views had not been properly considered by council.

They banded together to form the Tolmie-Tattersall Residents' Association, and the group's president said today the organized opposition achieved results.

"Ald. Howard Sturrock said he was impressed by the residents' solidarity on this issue," Leadem added.

He said the formation of the residents' association has also had a greater significance, because "our eyes have been opened to what Saanich proposes to do with this area in the community plan process."

There is concern over the plan's projected doubling of population in the Tolmie-Tattersall area, through continued townhouse and apartment development, he said.

Kootenays fire ringed

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Firefighters gained perimeter conrol Tuesday of a forest fire burning more than 1,080 acres in the Purcell Mountains about 60 kilometres northwest of this community.

The fire, which began in Cedar Slash on Saturday, was the first major forest fire outbreak in the Kootenays this season.

Forestry officials said they are investigating the possibility that the fire was caused by people hunting bear in the area, adding they will prosecute for damages if they can prove someone started it.

Ranger John Hogan of Cranbrook said it may take two or three weeks and the help of rain to put the fire out completely. Hogan estimated the cost of fighting the fire at $8,000 to $10,000 a day.

The provincial forest service used water bombers during the weekend in an attempt to halt the fire and on Tuesday 28 men and earth-moving equipment were on the fire lines.

Getting family involved

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Sharing the work of raising food among all members of a family group is the ideal way to have everyone enjoying the results — in time.

It won't happen overnight; bribery, driving or wheedling won't work either, but interest can be gradually developed by the less obvious method of talking about the growing plants while eating other vegetables at mealtimes.

Sometimes the history of a vegetable is worth telling. Or better still have a reluctant vegetable eater or a non-sharing family member look up the subject in an encyclopedia. Many homes have some kind of large dictionary or an encyclopedia as a school work aid, but it is seldom used for everyday information such as that concerning the food we eat.

As the early sowings are making fine progress outdoors, suggest a mini conducted tour, just to look at and talk about what the plants are doing now. Admire the pea flowers; show the slender pods just developing. Look for pods forming behind the splendid bumblebee-like flowers of broad beans.

Pull out the largest of the radishes for a lunch bag or a table salad, and a carrot or two for the same purpose. And who can resist gloating over finding the first pinhead-sized green tomato behind a flower that has been pollinated by wind or insect from another flower?

On the first tour, make it a 15-minute affair, unless someone suddenly asks about the weeds. "Why don't you pull them out," someone may ask. The working gardener of the family then says enthusiastically "Let's all do it now — it will take less than 10 minutes!"

Now let us suppose the only piece of ground for your use is contained in a wooden box on a rented apartment deck or a small balcony. There is still a chance to create interest in food production.

Make a start by working over the soil in the box with a small fork or trowel, dampening the soil first to break down the dry lumps. There may be a heap of old grass clippings somewhere on the property. If so, pull them apart and scatter through the soil, turning, mixing and dampening as you proceed.

This isn't the ideal way to start, but an early start is needed to gain immediate attention from the non-interested family, it is a beginning.

Two vegetables to hold attention because of their fast growth are cress (of the mustard and cress team) and the attractive red radish. Cress seed germinates and grows to edible stage outdoors in 10 days (five days indoors). Re-sow several times during season.

Radishes of the small round type take 28 days from sowing to pulling. The smaller the radish the more crisp it is, if grown quickly in a warm constantly damp soil. To have a continuous small supply in a balcony or sundeck tub, sow more seed when the first radishes are pulled for eating.

Few people can resist the interest of watching food plants grow and then enjoying them at the meal table.

If taken to school or work in a lunch box, there is sure to be some bragging about how they were grown at home. This is why the circle of gardening interest grows. Before long, those of the family who were "anti-vegetable" show interest in trying others already growing in garden or in balcony tubs.

Soon there will be more than one "pro" in the family, in both its meanings of professional as to the garden work as well as the older meaning "in favor of" vegetables.

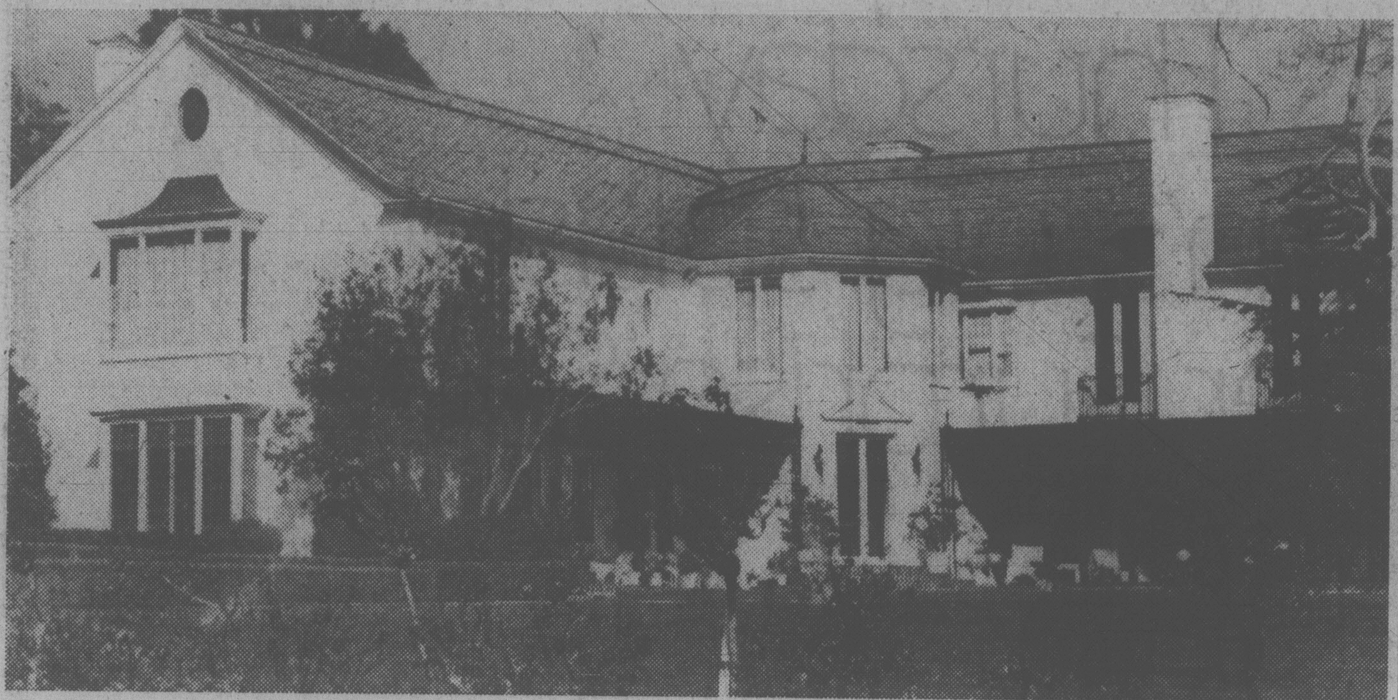
Mystical Pickfair open once again

Rogers and Pickford in 1961



The home which Pickford bought for $36,000 is considered a living museum of a bygone era

By ROBERT LINDSEY

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (NYT) — Pickfair, the home atop Summit Drive here where for 15 years Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks reigned over an era, is receiving guests again.

Miss Pickford, who is now 85 years old, and her second husband, Buddy Rogers, have opened their home in recent months for fund-raising parties and tours by selected philanthropic groups. This follows almost two decades in which the house was closed to all except close friends and family.

Because it was closed for so long, Pickfair has acquired a mysterious, almost mystical attraction for many people here. The home has survived as a kind of living museum of a Hollywood that died long ago, and its aura is enhanced by the presence, unseen but certainly felt, of Miss Pickford herself, who remains on an upper floor while the parties go on.

The new generation of visitors to Pickfair are touring a richly furnished home that symbolizes the opulence and power of Hollywood during the peak of its influence — from 1920, when Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, America's ranking movie stars, married and turned a former hunting lodge into their palace, until the late 1930s, after they had divorced. Pickfair — the name was derived from the couple's last names — was for many years the unofficial capital of Hollywood's brightest stars.

Its parties were considered command performances. Chaplin, Valentino, Gable, Keaton, Shearer, Crawford and dozens of equal magnitude attended them; Pavlova danced at Pickfair, and Maurice Chevalier sang. The four-storey house, which Miss Pickford bought for $36,000, has at least 22 rooms — "I've never counted," said Rogers, now 74, the band leader and actor who married Miss Pickford in 1937. (Clark Gable, he recalled, "once told Mary, when we got married, that it wouldn't last six months; it's lasted 42 years.")

The decision to open the home for parties again was all but accidental. A publicity man for the City of Hope, a hospital, called last summer to inquire if Rogers would consider allowing the home to be used for a benefit. He said he talked it over with Miss Pickford, and they agreed to surrender some of the solitude that the actress had pursued since the late 1950s. Since then, he continued, there have been eight other affairs for beneficiaries ranging from the Navy League to the State of Israel. He said there have already been about 100 requests. Rogers occasionally visits with the guests, but Miss Pickford remains alone in her quarters. "People call her a recluse, but they couldn't be more wrong," Rogers said.

EDMONTON — Joe Clark said today he does not intend to bargain with the New Democratic or Social Credit parties to keep his minority government alive.

In a 35-minute news conference, Clark said he hopes "all opposition parties will want to give the Progressive Conservatives a fair chance to govern."

He told reporters that Michael Pitfield, clerk of the Privy Council and the nation's most senior public servant, will meet him this week in Jasper "to review the accounts of Canada."

A Conservative government plans no immediate expenditures or changes in public service personnel, Clark said.

Clark indicated he may soon appoint some senators from Quebec and name them to his cabinet. Of the 135 Conservative MPs elected, only two are from Quebec.

Clark refused to mention any names except to say he was seeking "people who can reflect a contemporary Quebec."

They would not necessarily have to be well-known Conservatives and would be expected to play a leading role in putting forward the federalist option in the Quebec independence referdum expected as early as this autumn.

Names of other potential cabinet ministers would be discussed during the next four days but may not be announced for another two weeks, he said.

A relaxed but tired-looking Clark then prepared to travel to Jasper, Alta., 400 kilometres west of here, to meet with his top aides and plan strategy for assuming power within a period of two weeks.

Last night, Clark pledged that Quebecers would play a large role in his new Conservative government's goal to modernize Confederation and make Canada a "model" for all nations.

Clark, who at 39 will be the youngest prime minister in history, gave no indication how his minority government will seek to win the confidence of Parliament.

First, the man who becomes the youngest and first western-born prime minister since Confederation, will hold his Japser conerence to lay the groundwork for the first Conservative government since John Diefenbaker's administration was defeated by Lester Pearson's Liberals in 1963.

Clark fell only six seats short of an absolute majority, which means any one of the other three parties could give him enough support to control the Commons.

And although Clark's Conservatives won only two seats in predominantly-French Quebec, he pledged that "Quebec will not feel isolated in a Clark government."

The result left Fabien Roy and his rump of six Quebec Social Crediters with the potential to provide Clark with a bare majority of 142 seats in the Commons.

Roy said during the campaign he would back the party that won the most seats. But he publicly rejected in an April 26 statement any deal with the Conservatives that would see Socreds enter a Clark cabinet.

The vote count, barring any reversals in recounts, put standings in the 282-seat Commons at Conservatives 136, Liberals 114, New Democrats 26, Social Credit 6.

The Liberals got 39.9 per cent of the popular vote in losing the election. The Conservatives got 36.1 per cent, the NDP 18 per cent, Social Credit 4.5 per cent and others 1.5 per cent

Trudeau smiled through his disappointment in Ottawa and gracefully conceded defeat to Clark shortly after the last polls closed in northwestern Canada.

"As for me, I think I will be a pretty good leader of the opposition," said Trudeau, who signalled that Clark will have to fight for the survival of his minority government.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent, a potential power broker, said after a victory party in Oshawa, Ont. he was happy with increased NDP representation in the Commons — up from the 17 seats his party held at dissolution of Parliament. But he did not divulge how his party will respond to Clark's minority government.

Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy scored a stunning personal victory in the Quebec riding of Beauce Tuesday, but his party slipped from the 11 seats it held at dissolution to capture only six of the Quebec ridings.

Clark and his top advisers retreated to a luxury resort at Jasper Park to plan the takeover of the government. Trudeau planned to discuss the Liberals' future with the remains of his cabinet and Broadbent was to spend the next few days with his caucus.

The defeat removed the last Liberal government in Canada. There now are seven Conservative provincial governments, one Parti Quebecois, one Social Credit, one New Democrat.

The heartbreak for the Liberals started shortly after the polls closed in Atlantic Canada with the de-

It's a country split down the middle

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press

The electoral map of Canada is divided today between a Quebec that went massively Liberal and most of the rest of the country which voted Progressive Conservative in Tuesday's general election.

The partisan polarization of the country comes only months before Quebecers are expected to vote in a referendum on whether they want to separate from Canada.

Pierre de Bellefeuille, a member of Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's independence-minded government, said Trudeau's defeat would improve chances of a pro-independence results in a provincial referendum expected late this year or early next.

Robert Bourassa, former Liberal premier of Quebec said prime minister-elect Joe Clark must try to get adequate representation from Quebec — presumably by adding some senators or in a future election — because "the future of Canada will be at stake."

But federal politicians of all political stripes were quick to play down the idea of a French-English split.

Said Clark after his narrow victory: "Quebecers, even if they didn't vote for us, voted massively for federalism by electing Liberals."

Stephen Lewis, former New Democratic Party leader in Ontario, said: "There is polarization, but it is not the end of the country . . . . There is a strong federalist sentiment in Quebec."

In terms of seats, the Conservatives won in every province but Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland.

But popular vote figures show the regional split was not as severe as the balance of Commons seats makes it appear.

In Quebec alone, Liberals swamped Conservatives, capturing votes from 60 per cent of the electors while Clark gathered less than 14 per cent.

So while the allocation of Commons seats suggests a deep rift in the country, the popular vote totals indicate the division between supporters of Quebecer Trudeau and Albertan Clark is not extreme.

And the provincial division of Commons seats is not as sharp as it was in the minority Liberal Parliament of 1972-74. The Conservatives then held a majority of the seats in all provinces but Quebec.

Gunmen shoot back

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Unidentified gunmen fired a fusillade of bullets into a car today killing Salvadorean Education Minister Carlos Antonio Herrera Rebollo and his chauffeur, police said.

The shootings followed the deaths Tuesday night of 14 men, women and children who were shot by police outside an occupied embassy.

Herrera Rebollo, a prominent member of the Christian Democratic party and twice mayor of San Salvador, was driving to his office when an unknown number of persons fired at his car, police said.

The shootings Tuesday night outside the Venezuelan embassy marked the second time in two weeks President Carlos Humberto Romero's forces fired on demonstrators and raised the number killed by his military regime to at least 37. The victims were shot when they tried to take food to the militants holding the embassy.

Associated Press correspondent Gordon Mott counted the 14 bodies and said at least three were women and six appeared to be teen-agers or younger.

An undetermined number of demonstrators also were wounded.

Conservatives, NDP grab all 28 B.C. seats

Times News Services

The Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party divided British Columbia's 28 seats in Tuesday's federal election, shutting out a disheartened Liberal party in the province.

The two B.C. Liberal cabinet ministers, Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo and Environment Minister Len Marchand, were among those beaten.

Campagnolo said the loss meant the end of politics for her. While unsure of future plans, the former sales person at a Prince Rupert radio station said she may work in an underdeveloped country.

The Conservatives captured 20 seats, the last being Vancouver Centre where Tory Pat Carney, an economic consultant, eked out a win over Liberal Art Phillips.

A Vancouver Centre recount is scheduled for Friday.

Former Vancouver mayor Phillips came about as close to winning a seat in parliament as a man can come and still end up a loser.

Declared a winner earlier in the evening, Phillips wound up a mere two votes behind Tory candidate Pat Carney in the Vancouver Centre riding vacated by Justice Minister Ron Basford when the last poll reported.

The NDP improved its showing in B.C. by winning eight seats, up from two in the 1974 election when there were only 23 ridings at stake. Redistribution added five seats to the province.

The stunning defeat administered to the Liberals was worse than many of their campaign workers had feared. In the last federal election, the Liberals won eight seats.

Marchand, commenting after his defeat in the interior riding of Kamloops-Shuswap, attributed the Liberal demise to an anti-Tru-

Pot bust estimate rises to $70M

By DEREK SIDENIUS

RCMP now say as much as 35 tons of marijuana — not the 20 tons originally reported — were seized in a dramatic police and Armed Forces raid northwest of Tofino early Tuesday.

"We don't know the exact amount but it appears our earlier estimates were too low," RCMP Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said today.

"There definitely is more than 30 tons and it could be as high as 35."

The drug would have a wholesale value of between $50 to $70 million dollars and would generate more than $100 million from illicit sales.

Meanwhile an air and ground search is continuing for four men who fled into the bush when police raided a group of 24 persons offloading bales of the drug from two boats in Sydney Inlet about 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Twenty persons were taken into custody and held overnight in the RCMP lockup at Tofino. They are appear in provincial court in Victoria on charges of importing marijuana.

Three of the group are Americans, the remainder are either Puerto Ricans or Costa Ricans, Gardiner said.

In addition officers of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency arrested an American man on Orcas Island Tuesday. The man is being held in Seattle on possible conspiracy charges in connection with the drug operation.

Gardiner said he fears for the safety of the four missing suspects.

The men, whose identities are not known although one is believed to be an American, fled in light clothing without food or weapons.

The overnight temperature dipped to five degrees Celsius and a light drizzle and fog shrouded the area.

"There's nothing there but solid bush," Gardiner said. "There's an outside possibility we may never seen them again."

Searchers used megaphones to try to reach the men and tell them a way to get out, and overnight the lights on a police boat moored at the head of the inlet were left on to serve as a beacon.

Gardiner said the two boats seized in the raid, the 51-metre Samarkanda and the 16-metre Whitecap are being escorted by the Canadian Forces destroyer Qu'Appelle to Victoria.

About 50 RCMP officers, backed up by 300 servicemen aboard the destroyer, took part in the raid which was the culmination of a two-month investigation by the RCMP and DEA.

When police moved in at dawn Tuesday only two men were on board the Samarkanda. Gardiner said they meekly submitted. The others, on the shore, fled into the bush and it took several hours to round up the 18 suspects in custody.

Only one person was injured — a suspect was bitten by a police dog as he tried to run off.

Gardiner said no weapons were seized.

PCs take 3, NDP 2, Grits wiped out

Tory Taylor wins tightest V.I. race; Another Skelly grabs one for NDP

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Vancouver Island residents gave the federal Liberal party the cold shoulder Tuesday night electing three Conservatives and two New Democrats in a dramatic switch of votes.

Liberal candidates in all five Island ridings, including the two incumbents, Hugh Anderson in Nanaimo-Alberni and Jack Pearsall in Comox-Powell River, went down to crashing defeat.

The most stunning upset was in the Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands riding which was won by PC candidate Donald Taylor, a Duncan teacher. The riding had been an NDP stronghold for more than 16 years, 11 under Tommy Douglas, a former leader of the party.

Douglas said this morning that although he was pleased the NDP had captured the two northern seats, he was disappointed Rev. Jim Manly of Ladysmith, making his first bid in a federal election, had not won in Cowichan-Malahat.

"It was not an easy time for a new candidate."

He said it became apparent early in the campaign that Taylor was the man to beat.

"He ran last time (the federal election in 1974) and did very well in the southern part of the riding," Douglas said.

While the polls reflected a close race, with Taylor getting 19,010 votes and Manly 17,450, the crunch came when the results started to pour in from the normally NDP-strong northern half of the riding. There Taylor managed to hold his own.

The NDP had counted on a spillover of the provincial election which saw eight of the 10 seats on the Island go to the NDP.

"I regret losing personally but more so I regret the loss of this area for the NDP," he said. "We have had very good representation by Tommy Douglas and Colin Cameron (who held the seat from 1963-68).

Manly felt he was the victim of a powerful Tory tide and a growing movement to restore capital punishment of which he is adamantly opposed.

"It's hard to assess the total picture right now," he said, adding he was caught in the middle of the collapse of the Liberal party in the province.

Said the winner Taylor:

Taylor, 49, was making the rounds at his school, Mount Prevost junior secondary in Duncan this morning.

"I promised the kids I'd come back and see them win or lose," he said. "I'm saying hello and goodbye."

Taylor felt the big loser in the election was the NDP.

"I don't believe the NDP is a national political party after this," he said. "They had an enormous amount of money and tremendous backing by labor but the party really didn't do that well."

He said one of the tragedies of the election was that Trudeau had managed to destroy the Liberal party in the West.

"It was a one-man rule and the people rejected him," he said.

One surprising outcome of the election in the riding was the poor showing of Liberal candidate David Anderson, former MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Anderson, who had been touted as a strong contender with wide appreciation for his work in conservation and environmental matters, received only 7,071 votes.

But there were no surprises in the two Greater Victoria ridings which PC incumbents Allan McKinnon and Don Munro took handily, each receiving more than 60 per cent of the votes.

In the newly-created ridings in the northern half of the Island, the NDP's Ray Skelly won by a 4,500 vote margin in Comox-Powell River and fellow New Democrat Ted Miller took Nanaimo-Alberni by a 4,800-vote margin.

Liberals Pearsall and Anderson were distant thirds capturing only 9,827 and 10,234 votes respectively.

All told there were 22 candidates seeking seats in the five ridings.

Marxist-Leninist candidates Allan Bezanson in Cowichin-Malahat, Dorothy Ratzlaff in Victoria, and Katie Fraser in Nanaimo-Alberni fared even worse. Bezanson got only 51 votes.

Waves whipped up a few years ago by racist sentiments in school books may have died down but Pranab Kumar Bhattacharjee's rage hasn't.

The B.C. Ferries engineer, who was born in India and came to Canada 11 years ago, is angry that although a fuss was created back then and an inquiry held, no report has ever been released and absolutely nothing has been done about it.

Back in 1976 when his daughter Nilanjana was in Grade 4, Bhattacharjee took an interest in the school books she brought home to read.

"I found out that the native Indian people were shown in a very poor light but I didn't know what to do about it," he explains.

The sort of thing he objected to was a story called The Matchlock Gun in Voyager 1, a reader for Grade 4 to 6 students, which is published in Canada.

"The author starts by saying that the Van Alstynes were real people, which at once creates the impression in the young mind that this is a true story," Bhattacharjee points out.

"The whole story is how the savage Indians who have been compared to animals are out to kill a helpless white mother and her two young children. In the author's own words:

"They hardly looked like men as they moved. They were trotting stooped over, first one and then another coming up, like dogs sifting up to the scent of food. Gertrude felt her heart pound."

Bhattacharjee says he really wonders if an Indian child reading such a story can be proud of its heritage.

A couple of weeks after being upset by this and other school books, he heard a radio program on the subject.

"It was on the CBC Morningside program and they said prejudice is inadvertently taught in schools," he explains.

And so Pranab Bhattacharjee went on his own anti-racist crusade, talking to the school principal and writing to the Human Rights Commission in Victoria and the Greater Victoria school board.

"School board chairman (at that time) Susan Brice was very sympathetic and the Human Rights Commission said it would institute an inquiry," he says.

While that study was being made though, Bhattacharjee's own investigations brought to light several more surprising things. He found that other groups as well as native Indians were discriminated against or portrayed in a bad light — including those from India, his homeland — that girls and women were shown as weaker people in the literature and that, although the provincial education ministry has an approved reading list, an individual school board can still buy books that aren't on that list.

"In particular there were four books I found disagreeable and all four of them were not on the approved list, yet they were in the school," he says.

"In Voyager 2, there's a story which explains that India is a Hindu-controlled country, which is wrong," Bhattacharjee says. "There's the largest Moslem population in the world in India and two presidents have been Moslems."

Of course, the upshot is, he explains, that his daughter goes to school and is called "Hindu! Hindu!"

That happened in 1976 and things haven't got any better. Just the other day, says an unhappy father, Nilanjana was at junior high when a boy threw a coin at her and said: "A penny for the Punjab!"

"This kind of thing happens every day — it's just ignorance which must be wiped out with proper teaching."

B.C. is sadly lagging in this matter. The kind of prejudice he talks about in the books our children read was investigated and action taken back in 1965 in Ontario and in other provinces. Yet not a word has been heard of the study completed in the fall of 1977 by the Human Rights Commission here.

Trouble is, the mandate of the old commission expired and there was an eight-month gap before a new one was named. When I phoned the commission a spokesperson told me that yes, the survey was completed but no, there is no report available yet. Reason is, apparently, it was too narrow, covering only history and social studies books. Now they want a wider survey done, covering everything that is read.

But that doesn't exactly make Pranab Bhattacharjee ecstatic. He plans to push on alone and will present a brief at a public hearing on education here on May 30.

"I held off doing any more about this because I felt the Human Rights Commission was going to do something about it," he explains. "But obviously they're not. They're not going to do a thing.

"And so, as parents, we must put pressure on . . ."

Well, That's Politics

Only the NDP with seven seats prevented a Liberal sweep.

But the mood began to change, and 10 years later, the Tories have picked up 19 or 20 B.C. seats (depending on the final outcome in Vancouver Centre) and it is the Liberal's turn to be wiped off the provincial electoral map.

The party could hold one seat. It trails the Vancouver Centre riding by two votes.

NDP fortunes continue to yo-yo. In 1968 the party won seven seats, in 1972 it jumped to 11, then fell to two in 1974. Now they're on the upswing again with eight.

For the McKinnons, the victory margin was greater this time — and sweeter

The McKinnon crunch

Tory bastion staunchly defended once more

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The winner of the battle along Fort Street was a foregone conclusion long before election day though at least one challenger thought she had a chance to take out Tory incumbemt Allan McKinnon.

But McKinnon, likely Canada's next defence minister, not only sloughed off his opposition but strengthened his position over his last two victories in Victoria — the riding once held by the personification of Conservativism, Sir John A. Macdonald, the nation's first prime minister.

At 8:47 p.m., as unruffled as ever, McKinnon quietly thanked his campaign workers after the radio and television stations had declared him winner.

Gretchen Brewin, the NDP hopeful who felt the party's sweep of the two Victoria provincial seats would help her topple McKinnon, trailed a distant second, although doubling the number of ballots the party received in 1974.

Rookie Bob Monaghan, a lawyer, was another victim of the Trudeauphobia that swept the country. His Liberals slipped to third place in the riding they held as recently as 1972.

Incumbent McKinnon tallied 27,998 to Brewin's 15,344 and Monaghan's 7,763. Marxist-Leninist candidate Dorothy Ratzlaff picked up 89 votes.

McKinnon said his party will have no trouble dealing with the NDP in a minority government although past minorities have seen the NDP side with the Liberals.

McKinnon said the Tories will put forward its policies without coercion from the NDP.

If the NDP oppose increased defence spending, then the support will come from the Liberals, he predicted.

If McKinnon is named defence minister as many predict, he will be headed for a portfolio leader Joe Clark has promised will be greatly expanded.

Clark has pledged to strengthen Canada's role in NATO. And the country is in the midst of replenishing its fighter plane stock with a $2.3 billion investment. The decison of what kind of fighter to buy would fall on McKinnon's shoulders.

Before the early returns set the trend that would see McKinnon retain his seat, the mood in the NDP headquarters on lower Fort was tense but optimistic.

Amid the cheers and knowledge that the party could win its largest number of seats ever if all went well in B.C., supporters wondered if they dare hope for the unbelievable.

By 9 p.m., Brewin was further up Fort Street in the Tory headquarters offering congratulations to McKinnon.

She was joined by Monaghan. The two spoke briefly saying they might see each other on the hustings again sometime in the future.

In the subdued Liberal headquarters, cheers filtering in from McKinnon's supporters just down the street made the loss just that much harder to bear.

One of Monaghan's workers told him it was time to go, he had a duty to perform.

"So soon," the candidate quipped. It was not yet 9 p.m.

Easy win in Esquimalt-Saanich for ex-diplomat Don Munro

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

With a whopping tally of 29,800 votes, the former diplomat almost doubled the 15,787-vote total of the NDP runner-up, schoolteacher Bob Cameron.

Trailing an almost-out-of-sight third was the Liberal candidate, lawyer Alan Peterson, with 8,112 votes. Pro-life candidate Philip Ney collected 872 votes.

In a high voter turnout of 78 per cent, the result was never in doubt from the time the first polls were counted.

A mood of boisterous high spirits prevailed at Munro's campaign headquarters — the old Ste. Michelle winery building on Quadra — throughout the evening as Tory successes were pinned to a massive results board by students of St. Margaret's School.

Within minutes of Munro's victory speech at 9:35 p.m., Cameron arrived to offer congratulations to his opponent, followed almost immediately by Peterson.

Munro, who was first elected MP in 1972 and has been the opposition's environment critic, modestly sidestepped suggestions that he might be in the running for a cabinet post in the new Conservative government.

"That would be up to Joe," he said.

He attributed his success to his solid constituency service, coupled with anti-Trudeau sentiment.

Although Trudeau had run on a unity platform, he said, "he is anything but a unifier — he is a disintegrator."

Cameron, who complimented his opponents on avoiding mud-slinging campaign tactics, expressed surprise that the NDP didn't fare better in Saanich where he was recently an alderman.

Peterson was philosophical about his own defeat and the ousting of the Liberals.

"We didn't expect to make it this time, given the mood of the country and the feeling of change in the air," he said.

"But we're looking at it from a two-election point of view. We have a good organization and it looks like we'll be back in 18 months."

New York

The market turned upward late Tuesday after the government reported that orders for durable goods fell 8.7 per cent in April for their sharpest decline in 11 years.

Analysts said the news was welcomed by investors in the hope that any slowdown in business activity will bring with it reduced inflationary pressures and lower interest rates.

But by mid-afternoon the advance had run out of steam.

NLT Corp. led the active list, up 1⅛ to $29¼ amid rumors of a possible take-over bid by Ashland Oil. NLT said it hadn't been approached by Ashland or any other company.

Norton Simon, also active, lost ⅛ to $15⅞. A 300,000-share block traded at $16.

The NYSE's composite index rose .02 to 56.67.

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market firmed at the close of trading following the government's statement on reductions in public sector spending.

$6-a-bushel wheat year predicted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Foul weather has sweetened the outlook for possible record-high export prices for Canadian wheat that could exceed the $6-a-bushel level early next year.

Two market analysts Tuesday agreed an expected world-wide drop in crop production this year, caused by adverse growing conditions in some countries, could mean record prices by early 1980.

"I'm pretty sure we're going to develop some tightness in supply," Lynn Malmberg of the Alberta department of agriculture said in an interview Tuesday.

Malmberg said such a situation could result in price peaks in the $6- to $6.50-a-bushel range "probably in the first quarter of 1980."

But Peter Perkins of United Grain Growers, while also predicting prices in the $6-a-bushel range, said the level "is nowhere near as impressive as $6 was in 1974 because the dollar has shifted so much in value."

World demand rocketed wheat prices to a high of $6.07 a bushel in December, 1974 although the average for the 1974-75 crop year was $5.26 a bushel. The Canadian wheat board's asking price basis Thunder Bay Tuesday was $4.75 a bushel.

Malmberg said that on a global basis, wheat production could be down 20 to 30 million tonnes this year with the most notable reduction coming in the Soviet Union.

"They (Soviet Union) had some planting problems last fall with the winter wheat crop, and winter kill was rough," he said.

"This year they're behind in their seeding of spring grain and while they might get the crop seeded it's probably going to be late."

On the other hand, he said, the United States and Canada could produce slightly bigger crops than last year with good growing conditions.

Perkins said that while world stocks still are quite huge, a lower crop this year will reduce it "and that is the sort of circumstance where you get a more buoyant price for wheat."

Insurance claims light after twister

REGINA (CP) — One farm was extensively damaged and shingles were torn loose in a residential area of Regina Monday night when tornadoes twisted to earth.

There were no reports of injuries.

With the exception of the farm north of the city, a spokesman for Saskatchewan government insurance said damage was light. Clary Mitchell said there were about 15 minor claims from the Glencairn Village area of Regina.

Trucks gun past pickets

MONTREAL (CP) — Trucks owned by an independent company are maintaining the supply of fuel and cement to construction sites at the James Bay hydroelectric project, despite picket lines thrown up by support workers across the entrance of the project's only access road in Matagami, Que.

The 625 support workers, who were flown out of the isolated sites last Friday by their employer, the James Bay Energy Corp., after they refused to end immediately a 24-hour strike, have been unable to block the road, said Gerard Cote, secretary of the United Steelworkers local.

He said only 60 support workers have been able to make their way to Matagami, the community at the base of the 600-kilometre access road, after the corporation evacuated them to Montreal and Quebec City.

Drivers for Provost Trucking were "gunning their trucks" through the thin picket lines at rail yards in the town, about 700 kilometres north of Montreal, Cote said.

Cote was arrested Monday by police, who said he tried to prevent a truck from entering the corporation property. He was released on his own recognizance.

The corporation and the union are expected to meet later this week with Paul-Emile Talon, a provincially-appointed conciliator.

Hospitals still hit

QUEBEC (CP) — Nurses in many Quebec hospitals and clinics staged rotating strikes Tuesday for the fourth straight day, leaving skeleton crews and supervisory nurses to cope with essential services as best they could.

The 12,000-member Federation des Syndicats Professionnels d'Infirmieres et d'Infirmiers du Quebec has rejected a tentative contract negotiated by a coalition of unions representing 23,500 nurses and medical technicans.
